One Correction
Bang Goes the Brain Trust
Big Parade, No. 2
Rest, After Meals

—By Arthur Brisbane—

A correction. It was stated here on the authority of a gentleman from Alabama that many cotton farmers receiving money from the government for plowing cotton under, had invested part of that money in fertilizer to get, if possible, as big a crop on the remaining 75 per cent of acreage as they would have got on the whole.

A number of gentlemen in the cotton region, including Mr. H. W. Harby of Sumter, South Carolina, deny that cotton growers are using government money to fertilize the smaller crop.

They couldn't do it if they wanted to, says Mr. Harby, because the government hasn't yet given them their money.

The latest news is that the "Brain Trust" has exploded, and Professor Moley is leaving the State Department to run a weekly paper with Vincent Astor and W. A. Harriman. The weekly will support Franklin D. Roosevelt, NRA and this administration. Professor Moley will edit it and Vincent Astor will be publisher. Somebody might say to Professor Moley and Vincent Astor what Horace Greeley said in the eighteen forties. Albert Brisbane, returning from Europe as a young man, helped Greeley with the Tribune financially, secured for Charles A. Dana a job on the Tribune as exchange editor and was disappointed in the Tribune's policy. "You are too conservative, Greeley," said Albert Brisbane. "I shall start a weekly and say some things that need to be said." The wise Greeley replied:

"Don't do that, Brisbane. It will cost you a lot of money. You won't get the circulation. I will sell you a column on the front page of the Tribune every day; you pay me advertising rates. It will cost you less than the weekly and you can say anything you please, as long as I am not responsible."

The NRA "big parade," as Fitzpatrick of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch points out, is underway, and no one is safe who stands in the way of it.

Governor Lehman has signed a law suspending New York state's anti-trust law. "Anti-trust" might prove to be "anti-NRA," so that law fades away.

In Michigan Patrick H. O'Brien, attorney-general, tells the National Association of Attorney-Generals that no court will dare stand in the way of NRA.

Thanks to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's kind heart, there has been established a camp for "forgotten women."

There they are well fed, and a kind-hearted "counsellor" sees to it that they rest after meals. It is comforting to read of that. The pity is that women who camp in kitchen and the laundry, whose exercise is mending, darning, washing the children and making their clothes, have nobody to impress and there they, they should "rest after meals."

The NRA, rapidly developing, now has a "salute" just like Fascism, Hitlerism, and other isms. But it is the best salute, and General Johnson illustrates it. You hold your right hand as high up in the air as you can reach, and smile as though you really believe that prosperity has already come back. If any man holds his arm only half way up as a sign that prosperity is only half way back he's a traitor.

Changing times make changing conditions. A little while ago, at Versailles, France, with the help of the other allies was cutting both arms and legs and most of the body from the Austrian Empire, leaving only Vienna, the head. Now Dollfuss, French premier, says France will protect Austria's liberty, meaning against Hitler, of course.

Already Europe takes it for granted that another war is wanted, and as quickly as convenient, this time by Mr. Hitler. The French postponed their "revenge" for more than 40 years after 1870. Hitler will not wait, if he can help it. Europe hopes "the big powers will prevent a conflict."

In the Berlin University, you must have muscle, run, jump and put the shot. Even a professor is expected to be muscular. Nothing so drastic has happened since Theodore Roosevelt decided that generals in the American army must prove

BRAVES' SPIRIT WINNING! SAYS FUCHS

By JUDGE EMIL FUCHS
(President of Boston Braves)

May I not take this occasion of congratulating the Boston American in the acquisition of Custen Lake, my warm and loyal friend, as Sporting Editor? He heads a wonderful sporting staff of clean and able writers, in which the city of Boston is so rich.

If credit is due anyone for the uphill fight of the Boston Braves, I want to say at the outset that the sports writers are entitled to a great deal of it, for they have always written courageously, and given to the Boston players, as well as the club, fair treatment and help.

I recently compared the Boston Braves of today to the spirit of the country—the spirit of President Roosevelt—the spirit of the Braves. The spiritual and high character of Bill McKechnie has imbedded itself in the makeup of the boys representing the Boston Braves.

There is not a more sport-loving city in the circuit than Boston, and they have long deserved a contender. Let us approach the matter from the standpoint of calm judgment. If the fates are with us, and we have no accidents, we shall keep in the fight and hold our own with any club in the league. It has been said truthfully that a club is as strong as its reserves.

The Boston Braves must admit at this time that it has very few spare tires. We have searched the country from Montreal to the Pacific Coast in our efforts to add that reserve which is needed in the final fight that is now taking place. John Evers and Jack Potter are exist hunting somewhere. If we can secure them our chances will be increased.

If not, we must depend on the men now representing the Braves, with one excellent young prospect as a substitute for the infield, and a young man for the outfield who has not yet been able to find himself, but in whom Dave Bancroft, our old manager, has confidence and tells me: "Please do not give up on him, he has the makings of a big league ball player." I refer to Mowry, in whom we still retain faith and for whom an aggregate sum of $45,000 was paid, in giving $25,000 cash and

Hultman War Spreads to South Boston

CITY POINT IN DEMAND FOR HIS SCALP

Demand for Police Commissioner Hultman's removal was spreading today as South Boston residents joined with the West End in vigorous opposition to his policy of closing police stations which have operated busily for generations.

Opposition in the City Point section has crystallized into organized complaint after several weeks delay since the closing of Station 12, which was combined with Station 6, Athens st.

West End citizens, whom the commissioner is trying to placate with a promise of blinker signal lights to wink crime out of the district, were not at all overjoyed today at the temporary sub-station established by the police head in place of Station 3.

Three men were on duty at this sub-station, one at the desk and two on the ambulance.

A week ago there were 100 assigned to this station when in the past some of the best known Boston police officials first attracted public notice, including the late Supt. "Mike" Crowley himself.

West End business men who dropped around to see and suffer inwardly saw Patrolman William Walsh at the desk, and Patrolman William Callahan and James Kenney standing by for ambulance duty.

Meanwhile City Councillor John I. Fitzgerald prepared to press his Supreme Court request for a writ of mandamus to save old station 3, and his intended plea to the Governor next week for Hultman's ousting. The Supreme Court petition comes up Wednesday.

Paralysis in State on Wane

Although there have been far more infantile paralysis cases reported thus far this year in Massachusetts than in the whole of last year, the peak has been reached and the number reported weekly is dropping off, the State Department of Public Health reported today.

Reports last week showed 33 cases as compared with 40 reported the previous week—and this week, so far, there is indication of a continuing decline.

Up to June, in all the state, there were only 11 cases reported his year, but in July 78 were reported, and thus far in August 138, making a total thus far for the year of 228. In all of 1932 there were only 61 cases reported, but in 1931 the total of 1428 cases was reached.

HELEN JACOBS HINTS RIVAL 'NO SPORT'

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Copyright, 1933, by the Boston Evening American.

"Hal I been in Mrs. Moody's place, I would have gone through to the end but one person can't judge another's actions in sport and it's unfair to try. It would have been sporting for her to have congratulated me. Only she knows why she didn't."

Helen Jacobs, arriving at Marblehead for a month's vacation, today made her first comment on the controversial default of her "friend" rival, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, in the finals of the women's national tennis championship at Forest Hills.

At she had, she said, campaigned to correct her own faults in her matches with Mrs. Moody to win victory against her—the victory whose sweets were soured somewhat by her rival's default.

SUFFERS FROM COLD

Miss Jacobs, suffering from a heavy cold and an inflamed gall bladder, both of which she did admirably during her Saturday match, motored up from New York with Miss Alma Friend of Melrose and Marblehead, and was at the summer home of her companions' parents, Mrs. Leslie A. Friend, today.

She didn't bring a racquet and won't play any tennis for two months, she said. She will do a little horseback riding. She'll follow the Moody trail to California for a two weeks' visit with her mother and will then return to New York for the winter.

"There never was any feud," said Miss Jacobs, who never has crown becomingly. "I don't know what Mrs. Moody's feeling is towards me but as far as I'm concerned I never had any feeling of animosity towards her.

HASN'T A "COMPLEX"

"Of course it's very hard for people not in sport to know how we in sport appraise each other's ability.

"I was confident throughout the entire match. I believe that I played my best. Mrs. Moody had beaten me seven times and, of course, I always felt she was a better player than I and after each defeat I would analyze the reason for it. He's not true that I had a complex from playing her. I never ha da complex.

Missing Boston Boy Found Drowned in Wilmington

After a search since Sunday at Silver Lake, in Wilmington, the body of eight-year-old William McCarthy of Charlestown was found floating on the water early today.

Frantic search by police, firemen, National Guardsmen, Boy Scouts, troopers and volunteers was brought to a close by the keen eye of Sergt. John Barnicle of the state police barracks at Reading.

The body was floating about 20 feet offshore in the rear of Smith's bakery less than five minutes after Sergt. Barnicle joined the search at 8:30 this morning.

The McCarthy boy was vacationing at the summer camp of Mrs. Grace Murphy of Dracut st., Charlestown, and had gone to the lake Sunday with their son, Stanley Murphy, 5.

Mrs. John J. McCarthy of Baldwin st., Charlestown, mother of the drowned boy, took a lead in the search and was notified at the Murphy camp soon after the body was found.

The McCarthy boy was one of nine children of Mr. and Mrs. John J. McCarthy. He was a second grade pupil at the William Kent School in Charlestown.

TRAIN DIVES IN CREEK; 5 DIE

Tucumcari, N. M., Aug. 29 (INS)—Five persons are known to have been killed and many injured early today when the Golden State Limited, crack passenger train on the Southern Pacific Railroad, ran into a weakened bridge and crashed into Harris creek, six miles west of here.

The coaches plunged into a ditch alongside the earth fill on both the north and south sides, but were only partially in water. Three day coaches carried 43 passengers.

Bodies of four passengers brought to Tucumcari were not identified immediately. It was not known how many of the 43 passengers were dead or missing, but at least 25 were brought to hospitals here.

The train had stopped a mile west of the fill to investigate the track for possible damage. The east span of the bridge had been washed out, but the damage could not be seen from the west end.

$4000 TAKEN BY BANDITS IN LYNN HOLDUP

Two armed bandits, one clad as a milkman, today kidnaped Howard K. Stringer, 35, West Lynn plant cashier for H. P. Hood & Sons, Inc., drove him from West Lynn to Chelsea in his own car and left him on the marshes after robbing him of $4000 and some checks.

Stringer, son of Patrolman John Stringer of Lynn police, had just entered his car in the yard of the company, off Alley st., Lynn, to take the collections to the Manufacturers' Bank in Lynn when the bandit pair appeared.

"Shove over" one of the armed bandits ordered, and took Stringer's place behind the wheel.

BANDITS ENTER CAR

The other bandit got into the machine on the other side of the cashier, holding a revolver against his side, and with Stringer between them, keeping his eyes closed on their order, the car was driven away.

During the ride Stringer did not dare open his eyes, he said, and when the car finally was stopped and the bandits were departing, he was ordered to keep them closed for 15 minutes more.

LEFT ON MARSH

He found himself six miles away in the Chelsea marshes off Eastern ave., he told police, when he did open his eyes. The ignition key of the machine was gone and the bandits were entirely out of sight.

Stringer walked out of the marsh to Eastern ave., where he met a driver for his own company and was taken back along Eastern ave. to Revere police station.

The cashier said neither man wore a hat and that both were between 25 and 30 years old.

ICKES NAMED AS RULER OF FAIR COMPETITION OIL CODE

ROOSEVELT'S ACTION COMES AFTER MANY CONFERENCES

President Will Appoint Other Aides On Petroleum Administration Commission Tomorrow

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 29—President Roosevelt today appointed Secretary of Interior Harold F. Ickes administrator of the fair competition code for the oil industry under the National Recovery Administration.

This action was taken by the Chief Executive early this morning just before the head of the Interior Department, who already holds the important post of administrator of the $3,000,000,000 public works, took off for Washington by air after a lengthy conference with the President.

The appointment automatically makes Ickes head of the committee of planning and co-ordination provided for in the oil code, arranged by President Roosevelt just before he left Washington 10 days ago.

Harold F. Ickes

OTHER NAMES COMING

Following Ickes' departure it was learned the President intends to complete naming the personnel of the oil committee by tomorrow night. Its makeup provided one of the chief difficulties in the path of an effective oil code, as it will be concerned chiefly with handling the price-fixing phases of the agreement.

Secretary Ickes expects to have the committee well organized and ready for action in time for operation of the code.

Two other government representatives are to be named on the oil committee.

The price-fixing advocates are expected to get the big majority of members representing the oil industry. K. R. Kingsbury of the Standard Oil Co. of California is prominently mentioned as among this group, together with Wirt Franklin of Oklahoma, the president of the Independent Petroleum Association.

Some reports say the anti-price fixers will have two members, C. E. Arnott of Socony-Vacuum Corp. and C. B. Ames of the Texas Co. are discussed in this connection.

The name of J. R. Parten of Shreveport, La., has been mentioned as the independent representative.

PROBLEM SHAPING UP

A number of problems are expected to come up immediately in addition to that of price-fixing. When he prepared the code, President Roosevelt indicated there would have to be a number of minor changes made to insure its smooth operation.

He and the committee will work out these changes between now and Sept. 2. The President and Ickes went deep into the problem at a conference early Monday, and on his departure the secretary indicated he considered the whole problem as shaping up well.

Secretary Ickes will bring into his new position the experience gained when, just after his appointment as interior head, he brought the oil operators together in Washington as a means of getting them to adopt a trade association code enabling them to handle the many problems of the industry themselves.

NORMAN WITH ROOSEVELT.

Postmaster-General Farley, who arrived here yesterday, left at the same time Ickes took off. Farley said that the President took up a number of postoffice appointments with him, as well as 40 or 50 other miscellaneous matters.

Cheered by the report from Washington of an agreement, at last, between coal operators and miners, for working hours and wages, Mr. Roosevelt congratulated Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, and announced his plans to return leisurely to Washington by a sea cruise.

The bugaboo of stabilization of the currency in foreign exchange was very quietly laid aside by Mr. Roosevelt last night as he served tea to Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and George Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

A number of guests were present and the President was so busy entertaining them he found no opportunity at all to discuss international matters.

Those present included Prince Louis Ferdinand, grandson of the former Kaiser of Germany, and George Foster Peabody, both friends of the Roosevelt family.

Just Before the Battle -:- That Floored 'Kingfish'

"Kingfish" Huey Long doing society at fashionable Sands Point, L. I., just before somebody in society did Huey with a few punches where punches are supposed to do the most good. Today, in Milwaukee, Long cried he had been "ganged" and battled "a crowd with knives." But in Sands Point they say Huey was rude, that somebody hit Huey and Huey hit the floor—and that there were no gangs, no knives. In the photo, left to right, are Mrs. Al Williams, Capt. Williams, Miss Helen P. Mulrooney, Gene Buck, Mrs. Buck, Senator Long, Mrs. E. Mulrooney, Edward P. Mulrooney, head of the New York alcohol and beverage board, and Miss Elaine Hyland. 'KNIFING GANG GOT ME,' CRIES HUEY LONG

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 29 (INS)—U. S. Senator Huey P. Long, Louisiana "Kingfish," nursed his wounds in semi-seclusion today and in a written statement charged he had been knifed by a gang of ruffians at the Sand Point Bath Club, Long Island, N. Y., last Saturday night.

Long broke his silence after reports from New York said he received a punch or two from an unnamed but indignant guest whom he had insulted at a club social function.

His injuries consist of bruises about the head and face and a wound on his forehead close to the scalp.

AT VETS' CONVENTION

Senator Long is here to address the convention of Veterans of Foreign Wars, of which he is an honorary member.

"On Saturday night persons connected with the music composers and publishers asked me to attend a charity benefit Saturday to be given on Long Island," his statement read. "I had been there some 20 minutes, or more, when I walked into the washroom. Just as I faced the basin and the wall someone struck me from behind and upon turning three or four men covered me.

"I saw one strike at my head with a knife or something sharp, and I ducked so that it grazed my forehead. One man was blocking the door and I stumbled low through them and managed to wriggle clear. I felt blood coming down my face from where I was cut. I called some of my friends. We rushed back to the washroom, but all the persons had escaped and no one had seen them to identify one of them."

TELLS OF MANY THREATS

Long said he then returned to his New York hotel, where a doctor dressed the wound.

"I have been repeatedly threatened," the senator added, "any number of warnings have been given, even by rollman who stated that some such thing would occur to me sooner or later. I was lucky to have escaped with such trivial injury and am grateful. Except for a scar over the left eye, nothing remains to show for the Saturday night gangling."

Upon his arrival here yesterday Senator Long went into seclusion in a 19th floor hotel suite and declined to see newspapermen. He emerged only long enough to hand out the prepared statement which explained that he had refrained from discussing the incident until it appeared in the newspapers.

COUZENS' WIFE DEFENDED IN BANK PROBE

Attorney Takes Issue With Fr. Coughlin at Detroit Hearing

Detroit, Aug. 28 (AP)—The practice of the one-man Detroit bank investigating jury in taking "hearsay evidence.. was criticized before the jury today by former Judge Arthur J. Lacy, personal attorney for United States Senator James Couzens (R.), Michigan.

Lacy, declaring that such evidence taken at an open hearing becomes a public matter and a "gossipy thing," told Judge Kiedan, the one-man jury, that he believed the court made an "error in judgment" when it permitted such action.

DEFENDS MRS. COUZENS

"It may ruin the reputation of a perfectly fine and good man or woman," said Lacy. "Take the case of Mrs. Couzens, wife of the senator. A finer woman does not live. Yet the hearsay statement made here that she had withdrawn 'smart money' was published in the newspapers here without any amount being mentioned, and the inference was permitted that she had withdrawn an enormous sum."

News gathering associations, said Lacy, sent the report over all this country and the whole world, and it was published in London and Paris newspapers at a time when she was accompanying her husband who was representing this country at an international conference.

REPLY TO FR. COUGHLIN

Discussing testimony presented by the militant Fr. Charles E. Coughlin, crusading priest, before the last week, Lacy said:

"Take the case of Peter Monaghan (attorney and prominent Catholic layman mentioned by Fr. Coughlin as one 'doubtful of escaping federal indictment'). I don't know of a finer Christian gentleman than Peter Monaghan. If anyone had heard anything against him, it was a great tragedy that it could not have been presented secretly to this court and an investigation made to determine the facts. Then let the facts speak for themselves."

Lawrence Tot Falls Two Stories, Lives

Lawrence, Aug. 29—Edmund Charles, 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Charest of 23 Lafayette st., is being held under observation at the Lawrence General Hospital today pending determination of the extent of injuries the child suffered when he fell from the piazza on the second story of his home to a cement sidewalk.

At the time he fell he was calling to a pet kitten in the yard below. Rushed immediately to the hospital, it was found that no bones were broken, but it was decided to keep him under observation today.

SHOE OUSTER UP TO NRA HEAD

Brockton, Aug. 29—The Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen demanded that nine men discharged from two shoe factories be returned to work today under penalty of protest to the legal board of the NRA at Washington.

Work in two Brockton factories was disrupted when other workers refused to perform their tasks because of the discharge of their fellow employes.

If the manufacturers who have an agreement with the Boot and Shoe Workers Union do not return the men to work the Brotherhood will seek a decision as to whether non-payment of dues is sufficient grounds for discharging employes.

See U. S. Bankrupt in Moley Case

Moscow, Aug. 29 (INS)—The resignation of Prof. Raymond Moley as assistant secretary of state in the Roosevelt administration is "the first sign of bankruptcy" in President Roosevelt's program of "farming experiments," the Soviet newspaper Pravda said today.

"The resignation of one of Roosevelt's closest advisers and head of the so-called 'brain trust' must be regarded," Pravda said, "as the first sign of bankruptcy of the Presidents idea for 'reinventing' American politics by means of daring ideas and experiments.

"These ideas brought American capitalism to defeat at the London world economic conference, and now there is further testimony to the disappointment of American public opinion with Roosevelt's plans."

DRYS STRONG IN WASHINGTON

Seattle, Aug. 29—The eyes of the nation's wet and dry forces were focused on Washington today as voters went to the polls to decide the state's stand on the national prohibition problem.

Washington's system of election by 46 districts of 99 delegates to a state convention was considered a strong point in favor of the drys as it eliminates a popular vote.

Indications were that the cities would vote for repeal by a 2-1 popular majority, but with each district counting its votes independently and sending its own delegates to the state convention October 3. This may cut heavily into the wet votes.

ENGLISH GIRL SWIMS CHANNEL

Dover, England, Aug. 29 (INS)—The first successful attempt to swim the English Channel since 1930 was completed today as Miss Sunny Lowry, British star, touched the shore of Saint Margaret's Bay, near Dover, at 5:10 a. m., E. D. T., today.

Miss Lowry had swum from the coast of France in 15 hours and 40 minutes, having taken to the water at 6:30 p. m. yesterday.

Meanwhile a mass attack upon the channel records was launched by three England-to-France swimmers competing for a gold trophy for the fastest time in this direction. There were two Britons and an American, Charles Ziebelman, legless Chicagoan.

Ziebelman entered the water at 7:17 a. m. (2:17 a. m. E.D.S.) at Shakespeare Beach, West Dover, and struck out for the French coast.

He was followed by Miss Mercedes Gietze, former London stenographer, and E. H. Temme, London insurance clerk. Both Britons swam the channel from France to England in 1927. Ziebelman was forced to abandon an attempt a short time ago.

At 2:30 p. m., Ziebelman and the two English swimmers were approximately 12 miles out and all swimming strongly.

N. Y. Heat Wave Broken by Gale

New York, Aug. 29—Rain that swept into the city on a 51-mile-an-hour wind broke a three-day heat wave and left in its wake smashed windows, uprooted trees and broken electric lines.

The high temperature of 88, equaling the record for Aug. 28, brought one death from prostration, Louis Cochrane, 85, shipping clerk. After the storm the mercury sank to 75.

Boston's Navy Yard Band Ordered to Sea Duty

Boston navy yard is losing its band and its famous old receiving ship, both within the coming week.

The band is being transferred to sea duty upon the U. S. S. Indianapolis now aboard which Sec. Swanson is going cruising in Pacific water.

The prison ship, the ancient Southery, is to be decommissioned and sold at public auction. (How about a little prison ship for your summer backyard?)

Orders for the band to report—instruments and all—aboard the Indianapolis at League Island Navy Yard Sept. 5 were received here from the Navy Department today. There are 17 men in the band, whose leader is A. J. LaMar.

Since time immemorial the yard here has had a famous band which has functioned at the yard activities, in city parades and at many public affairs. It has practiced twice daily for years at the bandstand in front of the commandant's home. But it will be Secretary Swanson and the crew of the cruiser who will appreciate it hereafter.

The Southery, which was transferred from Portsmouth to Boston several years ago, is an ancient prison ship, which, in time, has incarcerated thousands of wayward navy men. All its prisoners have been transferred to Brooklyn. The band recently has been living aboard it, but now there will be no more band and no more Southery.

TRIO SOUGHT IN EVERETT PLOT

Three men were sought by Everett police today for a bold attempt at kidnaping with Mrs. Helen Caton, 28, of Bradford st., Everett, the near victim.

Mrs. Caton told police that she wrenched free from one of the trio after he had stepped from a sedan at Bradford and Buckman sts., Everett, with the command:

"Come on, kid, take a ride."

Her screams as she wrenched herself free brought the command from two others in the sedan for the third man to flee and the trio speeded away.

Mrs. Caton said the man who got out of the machine was about 40 years old and was clad in a dark suit. She could not obtain a good description of the others, nor did she notice the registration of the car.

HID MALADY IN HER FIGHT FOR WILLS' SCALP

Her Plight Was Worse Than That of Rival, Says N. Y. Doctor

Helen Jacobs is at Marblehead, a sick girl.

The national tennis champion, who hid her own illness during the Forest Hills finals that ended in the controversial default of her ancient feudal rival, Helen Wills Moody, drove over from New York last night with Miss Alona Friend of Melrose and Marblehead.

Suffering from a cold and an inflamed gall bladder, both of which she was fighting down during her match Saturday, Miss Jacobs was in bed today at the Marblehead summer home of her friend's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie A. Friend.

She was not to be disturbed under any condition before noon, it was reported at the Friend house.

DONE FOR THE YEAR

Her visit in this vicinity was wholly unexpected. She needs a long rest. She is done with tennis for the year.

A cold, which she had been nursing for several days, was made worse by the motor trip in the rain from New York and her physical condition probably will prevent any social funtions in her honor.

Meanwhile, with the two Helens, brunette and blonde, it had it, getting just as geographically far apart as they have been separated by their court rivalry for seven years, the controversial aspects of Mrs. Moody's default, trailing 0—3 in the deciding set, were even more sharply emphasized by a statement issued by a New York physician, who revealed that Miss Jacobs was constantly under treatment while playing.

DEFIED DOCTOR'S ORDER

Dr. Thomas C. Chalmers left it to be inferred that Miss Jacobs was really in poorer shape to play than Mrs. Moody who found herself suddenly incapacitated, on the verge of defeat, by a spinal ailment for which she had been under treatment and for which he was wearing a leg brace.

Neither young woman, apparently, shouldn't even have gone to the courts.

"Miss Jacobs played throughout the tournament against my advice," Dr. Chalmers said. "She fainted at Seabright after her match with Sarah Palfrey. Upon consultation with me there was an X-ray examination which showed Miss Jacobs suffering with an acute inflammation of the gall gladder. Her heart condition was by no means as good as it should have been for her athletic competition.

"She insisted upon playing in the tournament and it was necessary for her to be under constant treatment by me in order to play. The remarkable thing is that she was able to play. In her matches it was necessary for her to take stimulants, even while playing, as it was her desire she must compete all the way to the end."

That last phrase had something sworinge of the carefully chosen about it, for it will be recalled that Miss Jacobs offered Mrs. Moody a stimulant during the match and that Mrs. Moody declined.

According to published report, whiskey in capsule form had been prescribed as the stimulant for Queen Helen—that's Miss Jacobs now, you know.

'I WAS AT BEST"

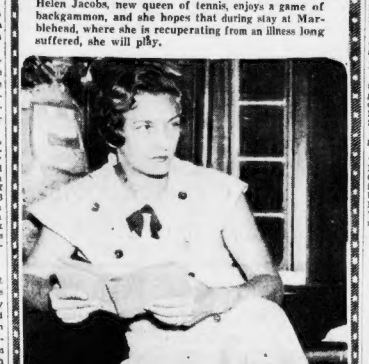
Miss Jacobs, a good sport, didn't iscuss her own phyical handicaps ut expressed her sympathy for Mrs. Moody and the hope that she couldn't feel any lasting effects rom playing up to the time of her efault.

"What would happen had Mrs. Moody been in condition I won't venture to say," she said before leaving New York. "I don't feel too bad about winning on a default.

"I feel terrible sorry for Mrs. Moody, and would say that spoils the victory for me. She had every right to stop when she felt she couldn't go on, and I certainly hope nothing serious will develop because she did play in that condition."

WHEN A QUEEN RESTS

Helen Jacobs, new queen of tennis, enjoys a game of backgammon, and she hopes that during stay at Marblehead, where she is recuperating from an illness long suffered, she will play.



Not only does she enjoy a good novel, but Helen Jacobs will also put in hours of her spare time writing a book as she recuperates at Marblehead. Her health was worse in the match even than Helen Wills', says her doctor. (International News Photos.)

RECOVERY HEAD TO HEAR BLUE EAGLE SCREAM

Boston to Report 100 P. C. Behind Drive When He Comes

The man who makes the Blue Eagle scream—and you can take that any way you want and still be right—is coming to New England tomorrow.

And New England plans to do the right thing by him.

Gen. Hugh Johnson, national recovery administrator, is going to get the one greeting that he will prefer above all others. He is going to be told that New England is 100 per cent behind his Blue Eagle, at least so far as the consuming public is concerned.

The general is due to arrive at East Boston airport from Washington at 1 p. m. But he would not make a definite promise to this effect. He's busy these days whipping the stragglers into line, and it takes most of his time. So, maybe he'll be a bit late getting to Boston, or maybe he'll zoom out of the skies like nis thunder bird, a bit ahead of schedule.

PLANS TO MEET HIM

Be that as it may, three formations of army, navy and national guard planes will be ready to escort him to the airport. And when he lands, he'll find Robert M. Shepard, chairman of the New England Recovery Board, there to greet him.

Also on the reception committee will be a representative of Gov. Ely and a representative of Mayor Curley, as well as Mrs. Eva Whiting White, the only woman member of the New England board, and Miss Mary Ward, chairman of the women's division of the Massachusetts board, in charge of the aerial escort will be Capt. Robert D. White, department of commerce inspector.

While Gen. Johnson is approaching the airport, almost a thousand New England gather for a luncheon rally in the Hotel Statler. They will sit down to table at 12:15 since the general asked that they do not hold the soup for him. He'll talk after the meal is over. He'll get more attention then, he figures. Speeches always come out second in a contest with food, he says.

BIG POLICE ESCORT

So, while Gen. Hessert is being served in the Statler, the general will be making a Roman entry into Boston. Escorted by approximately 20 state and city policemen on motorcycles as well as the cars of the reception committee, Gen. Johnson will be driven through Chelsea and Charlestown into Boston.

Entering from the Charlestown Bridge will be as follows: North Washington st. to Haymarket sq., Washington to Dock sq., Devonshire through Devonshire st., State st., Court st., Tremont st., Boylston st., Park sq., Columbus ave. to the hotel.

All traffic will be barred from these streets between 1 and 1:30 p. m.

Almost immediately on his arrival, Gen. Johnson will go to the radio studio in the hotel to make a speech over a national hookup. It will be heard locally over WBZ. After that he will address the dining Blue Eagle promoters.

At local NRA headquarters, Sec. Hugh Butler said that approximately one person in every 100,000 in Boston and more in suburbs has refused to sign the card.

Two open air rallies, under the direction of Maurice Goldman, have been escheduled for 8 p. m. tomorrow in Dorchester, one at Woodrow and Blue Hill aves., the other at Lawrence and Blue Hill aves.

It is expected that Boston and all New England, save Maine, will be signed up 100 per cent by tonight.

NRA Offices Like Tower of Babel

Fifteen interpreters in the NRA readquarters at 80 Federal st., are the busiest persons in the office. They are literally being stormed with requests for information about the big recovery drive and how one can lend a hand.

SLAIN CHILD'S MOTHER IN COLLAPSE

By PEGGY DOYLE

In the little Catholic cemetery at Gloucester, yesterday, they buried beautiful, three-year-old Shirley Anne Cuningham, of Beverly, innocent victim of the depression.

The child, who the neighbors had probably been the most tenderly reared and protected of all the children in the vicinity, came to her death at the hands of a father crazed by two years of futile searching for work and the strain and worry of being unable to care for his destitute family.

TELLS TALE OF FALL

For some time, his distraught air and dazed, unbalanced manner had been the subject of comment by neighborhood friends and acquaintances. At intervals, he would seek out his landlady, Miss Susan Cullivan, 48 Cabot st., and weep out a despairing saga of his search for work.

Saturday morning, little Shirley Anne and her father, Clifford W. Cuningham, 27, went on one of their customary strolls towards Beverly Beach. Some time later, an unidentified resident reported to the Beverly police that he had observed a man acting strangely on the premises of W. G. Brown at Beverly Cove.

When the police arrived, they found Cunningham bending over the body of his dark-haired little daughter, weeping and murmuring incoherently. It was a "mercy" killing, he told them. While he was sitting on the ground, he said, the little girl had wandered away and fallen off a cliff.

"I rushed to the edge of the cliff and looked over. She was lying between two big boulders. I got down as quickly as I could.

FACES SANITY TEST

"She was moaning and bleeding terribly. There was a codline lying on a rock. I tied it around her neck. I wanted to end her suffering with that, but I couldn't and I took it off. Then I picked her up and dashed her head against the rock.

"Then I carried her up to the piazza of the house at the top of the cliff."

At yesterday's hearing, the court ordered Cunningham to Danvers State Hospital for ten days' observation on the recommendation of Medical Examiner J. A. Simpson. The child's mother, who bravely fought off collapses during the funeral ceremonies, fainted and had to be carried to a waiting auto by her two brothers following the final sad notes in the little country cemetery. She is in seclusion at the home of her mother, Mrs. Albert Rich of Rockport.

His wife and children were at Canaanugh's bedside, unrecognized, and with them was Miss Ruth Keene, of Boston who tutored many of the football players that made "Cav's" coaching nationally famous, so they could pass scholastic examinations.

Cavanaugh's health, which caused his retirement from football coaching, seemed improved after a recent abdominal operation. He had been released from the hospital Aug. 8 after a recovery doctors considered remarkable. Last week he suffered a shock.

$125,000 PRIZE STARTS DEATH TRAIL RUSH

Lawyer Also Seeks to Learn if Girl Gets the Wadsworth Estate

Reno, Nev., Aug. 29 (INS)—Reno today was plunged into a death mystery with the stakes set at $100,000 for the correct solution.

Under the terms of the will of Horace Elliott Wadsworth, who died here on Aug. 10, this huge reward will be paid to whoever brings about the conviction of the person who killed him—if it can be shown he was murdered.

The investigation of his death, Wadsworth stipulated, must be a private one, with an additional $25,000 offered to prosecute, whoever can be shown criminally responsible.

Police regarded the case as closed, but with $100,000 at stake it was certain there would be a thorough search for any evidence that might point to foul play.

He died while here presumably to file suit for divorce against Elizabeth Baker Wadsworth of Straford, Ontario.

At first it was believed he died of an overdose of sleeping tablets taken accidentally, or with suicidal intent, or administered by a mysterious killer.

However, Coroner August Frohlich announced physicians signing Wadsworth's death certificate gave 'alcoholism' as the cause. This closed the case officially, and the body was taken to Kalamazoo, Mich.

Atty. Lester Summerfield, who represented Wadsworth, altered today there was "absolutely no evidence of foul play."

Wadsworth, he explained, had that fear, but an analysis of his stomach showed no poison.

An attorney in Reno seeking to learn if Wadsworth was estranged from his second wife. A daughter by the first marriage will get the entire estate if he was estranged, but if not, the estate will be divided.

FOG HAMPERS HUNT FOR TRIO LOST AT SEA

Still hampered by fog and haze, coast guardsmen early today reported no success in their search for three wealthy New York youths, whose sloop, Pentertipt, is sought on direct orders of President Roosevelt.

Parents of the boys cling to the hope that the craft might have been forced to shore by last week's storm and that the youths failed to report their whereabouts.

Every small port had been thoroughly searched by guardsmen, however, with no trace of either the craft or any wreckage.

Followers of the sea, tracing the course of last week's storm against that of the little craft, determined that the boys would have been forced into haven around the Delaware Capes and search was concentrated there.

Meanwhile, patrol boats, destroyers and cutters toured the Atlantic under poor visibility in the hope of finding some trace of the boat.

New Nazi Ban Falls on Schumann-Heink

ZELDA SCHUMANN-HEINK

MADAME SCHUMANN-HEINK

The prediction that Chancellor Hitler will eventually turn to German-Jews for aid was made by Madame Schumann-Heink, famed opera star, when she revealed that she is on the German black list because of her Jewish blood. (International News Photos.)

By DOROTHY ROE

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Aug. 29—White-haired, kindly Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, whose voice has won her international fame through two generations of music lovers, cannot return to her native Germany.

But it is not only because her grandmother was a Jewess. The grand old lady of the stirring voice was barred from singing in her native land four years ago, when German propagandists started a whispering campaign against her, because she sang for American soldier boys during the World War.

They forgot that, while four of her sons fought for America, one fought for Germany and was killed.

And her sentiment against the Nazi regime, freely voiced, has made her return even more impossible.

Sitting in her hotel apartment here, the imposing, sweet-faced old singer, whose sons and daughters, grandchildren and great grandchildren always have been her greatest and most passionate interest in life, said:

"Maybe part of my feeling is the Jewish of me. I am not ashamed of that. I know that much of the artist in my heart, much of my deep love for people and the fire that is in me, I owe to my little old Jewish grandmother, God rest her soul.

"She was a Jewess, and she eloped with a Gentile and embraced the Catholic faith. But before she died she returned to the faith of her fathers.

"I am of the Catholic faith, but I am proud of my Jewish blood.

"Herr Hitler cannot run his Germany without the Jews. He is cutting off the life blood of the nation.

"They cannot have the theater, the opera, the prosperity they desire without the Jews.

"Germany cannot live without the Jews, and they will find it out soon.

"They have banished the great Jewish doctors of Germany, to whom people from all over the world came for cures. That not only is not human, it is not sense."

Mme. Schumann-Heink sighed and there was fire in her eyes as she went on:

"I would not go back to Germany now to sing, even if I could. Not after they barred me from the Opera House in Hamburg where I sang for 15 years. They know, as they know now, that I love my fatherland.

"And how can Germany forget that her Jews died in the war, just as her other sons did. They were good enough, then, to die for the fatherland. Why are they not good enough to live in it?"

Tea, Muffins for Roosevelt Guest

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 29 (INS)—The meeting of Montagu Norman, governor of the bank of England, with President Roosevelt, turned out to be a delightful social visit.

The great British financier had tea and muffins with the President, the First Lady of the land, the President's mother, Mrs. James D. Roosevelt, and some friends.

Rockefeller, Jr., Runs Out of Gas

The late Charles A. Dana would have delighted in this story, for when a Rockefeller runs out of gas it's as much news as a man biting a dog.

Winthrop Rockefeller, grandson of the world-famous oil magnate, ran out of gasoline in Hingham, believe it or not. However, due to his innate efficiency, he still managed to catch a Rochester (N. Y.) express from the Trinity Pl. Station and win a bet. He had wagered with fellow-workers at the office of the Colonial Beacon Oil Company that after work he could swim in Hull, dine in Cohasset and catch his train. On the way up from Cohasset his machine ran out of gas, but he made the train.

Spy Suspect Had Secret Money Mail

Cristobal, P. C. Z., Aug. 29 (INS) Charges Corp. Ralph Osman, U. S. A., so-called "young Communist" on trial before a court-martial for espionage, received mysterious letters containing money.

The ward orderly at Fort Sherman said he had mailed letters on many occasions for Osman addressed "P. K. care of Singer, Brooklyn, N. Y." Replies were received, he said, under the alias of John Dynes, Box 1276, Cristobal, which sometimes contained $50 bills.

Chicago Racketeer Trial Postponed

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP)—Eight of the 24 defendants indicted for a gambling conspiracy appeared in criminal court today, only to hear the state obtain a continuance until September 5.

Al Capone was due to appear on a habeas corpus writ, but the government has made no move to release him from Atlanta. It was assumed he would be brought here when the state is ready for trial.

Machado at Bermuda

"Wait a minute!" shouted an inspector. He boarded the ship, spoke briefly to Machado and Machado returned to his cabin. None of his party went ashore.

BLUE SHIRT CRY 'NO VIOLENCE,' SAYS O'DUFFY

(Editor's note: Following is the second of a series of articles describing the "Blue Shirt" movement against the government of President Eamonn de Valera in the Irish Free State.)

Bandon, Irish Free State, Aug. 29 (INS)—A program of "no violence and no revolution," but with defeat of President De Valera at the polls as its aim, was outlined to International News Service today by Gen. Owen O'Duffy, leader of Ireland's "blue shirt" army.

O'Duffy described his plans to unseat De Valera by strict parliamentary methods as reports circulated that he had completed formation of a new fusion political party, embracing the strongest elements opposed to the incumbent regime.

"Are we outlaws?" the general asked. "De Valera says so, but we are willing to await the verdic. of the people.

"Our program is this—no violence and no revolution.

"Here is De Valera, who combatted the public safety act, and is now using it to declare us outlaws. We are going right ahead and organize until we beat him. It make take one, two or three years, but we shall get him out.

"The Blue Shirts were formed merely to assure fair elections. There will be no more election terrorism. Let De Valera call elections whenever he wishes—we will be there to see there is honest voting."

Gen. O'Duffy's participation in the anti-De Valera fusion marks his first active work in politics.

The organization will be known as the National Party, and will include the organization of former President William T. Cosgrave, opposition leader, and the Centre Party, led by Frank McDermott.

High Speed Costs Bus Driver $10

That inviting stretch of turnpike that runs to Worcester got Richard S. Golden, 32, of Commonwealth ave., Allston, into trouble today.

Golden, a bus driver, was fined $10 in Newton court for speeding on the new Worcester turnpike while en route from Boston to Hartford.

Patrolman Alfred W. Hammel declared that Golden said he had to cover 110 miles in two hours. Hammell said he was going 50 miles an hour.

Golden denied it and said he was allowed two hours and 45 minutes for 106 miles via the Auburn cutoff.

Madman Shoots Wife Foster Son, Escapes

Chicago, Aug. 29 (INS)—In a supposed fit of madness early today, Dr. Peter Swier, 40, who lives on a one-acre tract in Bloomingdale, tried to kill his wife, 1da, and foster son, then set fire to their home and chased his wife across a prairie, firing at her with two revolvers.

After wounding Mrs. Swier twice, Dr. Swier left her lying in the chill of the night, garbed only in a nightgown. Authorities are searching for the crazed man.

GRETA GARBO comes to life

Her True Story Now To Be Printed For The First Time

Greta Garbo's true life story and true love story are to be printed for the first time. This same statement made about any other character in Hollywood would not be news. It would just be funny. In Hollywood there are few secrets and little reserve. Again and again they turn their silly souls inside out for the sake of a head line.

But not so, Garbo.

She has been "the cat that walked by herself." She has stood alone on the mountain top. Even her pres agents scurrying for copy have never been able to fathom the real Garbo who has now been revealed for the first time.

True Story Magazine has had many hundreds of thousands of all-too-human human documents pass across its editorial desks. Life stories and love stories that reached to the very heart of us millions upon millions of everyday people for whom they were written. But this True Story of Garbo comes pretty close to the top.

For Garbo herself not only comes from the common people. She still belongs to the common people. She has not changed.

The first chapters of the Great True Story of Greta Garbo will appear in the next issue of True Story Magazine which will be out on Friday, September 1st. Watch for it eagerly. It is well worth watching for.

SUBWAY PLAN UP TO STATE BOARD

The fate of Mayor Curley's proposed $8,500,000 Huntington ave. subway project, is in the hands of the state emergency finance board. The Federal Advisory Board for Massachusetts sat with the State Board members.

The project, which the mayor contended would put 3000 men to work for three years, was opposed by speakers representing the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Boston Real Estate Exchange, Boston Municipal Research Bureau, and private interests in the Huntington ave., district.

It was also opposed by Bernard J. Rothwell, chairman of the Boston Elevated directors, speaking as a private citizen. He charged that the project "completely ignores the outstanding traffic problems of Boston," and declared that in his opinion "neither public interest nor public necessity justify any such excessive expenditure."

Pres. Elliot Wadsworth of the Boston Chamber of Commerce said he regarded the mayor's proposal as "the most extravagant waste of public money that has yet been proposed."

Francis R. Bangs, representing the Boston Real Estate Exchange, said the exchange was opposed to the project as an "unnecessary piece of work and a very expensive one."

3 Couples Kiss for Hour in Marathon

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—Three couples qualified for the final round of Coney Island's world championship kissing marathon" here by remaining locked in each others arms for more than an hour.

Seven teams entered the contest, in which no holds were barred, but they began dropping out after the first three minutes. The only married couple were Mr. and Mrs. George Newcombe, of Long Island, who observed their golden wedding anniversary two years ago, and who held out for 19 minutes.

The finalists, who will compete for the championship Wednesday, are Ethel Kane and Michael Calabrese; Helen Gould and Jerry Cardinal, and Betty Burns and Frank Ferreti, all of New York.

Unhappy China, her enemy is not Japan, but nature. The governor of Shantung reports 3,000,000 destitute in Western Shantung, fleeing from rising waters, 800 villages submerged.

If we really took the Christian religion seriously in this country, on week days as well as Sunday, this would give us a chance to get rid of some of the 161,000,000 bushels of wheat that the government has stored away and cannot use without injuring the farmer.

The decision in Texas makes it quite certain that the "noble experiment" will soon go to join other experiments that were well meant, but did not work. Twenty-three states in succession having voted against prohibition, it is unlikely that the Eighteenth Amendment will survive the final results.

Repeal will come too late for three men and one woman of a "party" in a Brooklyn shanty. The "party" took the form of an anti-freeze mixture. All drank. Four died.

Trapped Deer To Be Saved By Bridge

Watkins Glen, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP)—Work was to be started today on a bridge across a 200-foot gorge to the narrow ledge where a seven-point deer has been trapped for three days in Watkins Glen state park.

After three days of unsuccessful efforts to release the animal from his perilous perch from which his mate had already fallen to her death in the torrent below, Herbert Blanche, general superintendent of the Finger Lakes state park commission, last night ordered the bridge to be constructed.

Hundreds of persons have watched rescuers attempting to rescue the deer.

FALLS 20 FEET; STAYS ASLEEP

Kathleen was saved from serious injury in the fall because she landed on the rain-soaked lawn of her home.

In the belief that the child sought aid because of fire or illness in her home, the truckman halted. Three times he inquired if he might aid and each query met with no response.

Twigg finally roused the girl and turned her over to Patrolman John Fitzgerald of the Weymouth police, the girl having crossed the Braintree-Weymouth line on her strange walk. Police found she suffered a bruise over the right eye.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Leary, had to be aroused at 4 a. m. by police who returned the child.

Spend Two Billion NRA Proposal

Washington, Aug. 29 (U8)—A plan calling for the simultaneous expenditure of $2,000,000,000 for all kinds of merchandise is under consideration by the NRA as the opening gun in the "Buy Now" movement.

Pledge cards would be distributed throughout the country and individuals asked to sign up to spend $100 each. When 20,000,000 signatures are obtained, but not until, the signal would be given. Details remain to be worked out.

WOMAN READY TO FACE QUIZ IN N. H. MURDER

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Exeter, N. H., Aug. 29—County Atty. George Scammons and police had a two-hour conference today, after which Scammons and an officer departed for Haverhill, strengthening a report that Mrs. Elizabeth T. Croucher was ready to surrender for questioning in the slaying of Louise Bostell Palmer.

Mrs. Croucher, wealthy East Cambridge resident, is wanted here on a warrant charging a serious offense and was reported kidnaped to prevent her being questioned in the murder of the Exeter nurse.

During today's conference, a report grew that Mrs. Croucher had sent word, through a Haverhill attorney, that she was willing to return here if the charge were dropped, and submit to a grilling.

Meanwhile, investigators examined the plumbing of Mrs. Croucher's rooming house in Stratham, where Alfred Teixriran already under arrest for questioning on the murder, made his home.

GRILLED FOR HOURS

Teixriran is technically under arrest on a serious charge, the same as that upon which a warrant has been issued for Mrs. Croucher. In the event that Mrs. Palmer's body was dismembered in the Croucher rooming house some trace of human blood might be found in the drain, they said.

Hours of grilling directed at Teixriran brought answers that led them to the rooming house and caused them to bend all efforts toward locating Mrs. Croucher.

A sister of the missing witness, Mrs. Mary Woodbury, told Cambridge police that she feared for the safety of her sister in view of her disappearance with three men at the start of her trip here. Mrs. Croucher made her home in Otis st., East Cambridge, with her sister when she was not at the Stratham rooming house.

AWAIT CHEMIST'S REPORT

Police Chief Thomas P. Chrysler, head of the baffling investigation here, still awaited definite announcement of chemical experts on whether or not blood stains were found on a pair of trousers seized from Teixriran.

State chemists already have told reporters that traces of human blood were found in three stains on the trousers but they have made no official report to Chief Chrysler.

As soon as the official report is received a warrant for murder against one person and a warrant as accessory against another will be sought, Chief Chrysler said.

Kindness Is Fatal to 'Poor Fish'

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 29—Here's another fish story.

As told by Motorcycle Officer John Leonard, he gave a goldfish in a bowl to a niece who was visiting him. Playing in the cellar, she put the bowl in a secluded spot.

Recently, Leonard found the bowl in the cellar, with only about an inch of water remaining, but the fish swimming about.

Leonard says he refilled the bowl, and gave the fish its first food in 28 months. The fish died a few hours later.

NO TAXIS, GIRL RINGS FIRE

Malden's dashing fire laddies alighted breathlessly from their snorting apparatus in Broadway sq., at 2:30 this morning, having responded to an alarm from Box 57 in record time.

They found Miss Anna Roy, 33, of Norway st., Back Bay, supporting the pole which in turn supports the fire box.

"There's no fire," said Miss Roy, "so there's no sense in looking around for one. But I'll tell you (growing confidential) I wanted a ride. I tried to get a cab and I couldn't and then I tried to thumb a ride and I couldn't. So I thought (unwisely) you might give me a little ride on the fire truck."

Gentlemen, ever, those Malden firemen.

"Tell you what, Miss. It's against the rules to ride on the fire trucks but we've got a dandy little vehicle in the police department anybody can ride in."

They called it and Miss Roy got her ride. In Malden court today she was fined $15 for the false alarm and $5 for imbibing before ringing it. She didn't have the money and was committed.

LYMAN BALKS AT NEW WORKS

Commissioner of Public Works Frank E. Lyman, in reply to an open letter from Senator George G. Moyse of Waltham, demanding to know the reason for delay in starting public works under the National Recovery Act, today disclaimed responsibility for the holdup.

"As I recall the situation," wrote Lyman, "at the time we submitted a program under the straight federal aid of 100 per cent, we stated the program could be advertised before the end of August.

"To date very few of these projects have been approved.

"A few days later, namely the latter part of June, you requested the department to state whether they could submit an additional program that could be started in the near future. We submitted then a program totalling an amount in excess of $13,000,000 and stated that we could advertise it all within 30 days from the time of final approval.

"In you recent act you appropriated a sum not to exceed $10,000,000, but placed it in other hands for approval."

Methuen Man Held on Charge by Girls

Haverhill, Aug. 29—Donald Fiore, 28, of Tilton st., Methuen, was arrested here shortly after midnight this morning on a warrant issued in the Lawrence police. MILITIA PLAN OFFERS HITLER ARMS WEDGE

Vienna, Aug. 29 (INS)—German Nazi storm troopers kidnaped Franz Haas, Austrian auxiliary policeman, on the Austro-Bavarian frontier near Valepp in the Tyrol, Saturday, an official report stated today. Haas was believed taken to a Nazi camp in Tegernsee.

Berlin, Aug. 29 (INS)—Germany hailed today with unconcealed delight the news that Austria, with the consent of France, England and Italy, intends to organize a militia as a first move toward reintroduction of compulsory military service, banned by the St. Germain peace treaty.

This first breach, with the approval of the Allies, of the military clauses of any of the peace pacts imposed on the defeated central powers at the close of the World War, offers an entering wedge for Germany to reassert her claims to increase her armaments.

Word of the Austrian plans was contained in a speech delivered last night by Karl Vaugoin, Austrian Minister of War. Though the three western powers have approved strengthening of the Austrian military establishment to enable Chancellor Dollfuss to combat what he professes to believe are threatening moves by German Nazis, the Berlin Nationalist press nevertheless is extremely pleased.

"The news is welcome to us," said Der Tag, editorially, "because it sets a precedent establishing German claims to adequate defense."

Leading monarchists today maintained silence regarding reports an agreement had been reached whereby President Von Hindenberg would be succeeded upon his death by a Hohenzollern prince as regent.

Reports, considered reliable, say Chancellor Hitler has agreed to remain in his present position, but that he would turn over the position of head of the Reich to a member of the family of the former Kaiser.

The plan is supposed to be contained in a new will drawn up by the 86-year-old Hindenburg only last week. He is reported to have discussed his succession with leading members of the government, all of whom were reported willing to agree to the solution.

Young Roosevelt Has Toreador Ambitions

Paris, Aug. 29 — Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., the American President's third son, has become so much interested in bull fighting that he plans, it has been learned, to return to Spain next year for some intensive instruction in the art.

Already, it is understood, he has had some elementary lessons from Sidney Franklin, the Brooklyn matador. They are both in Paris at present.

These envelopes will be on all rides in Paragon Park, the Roller Coaster, Red Mill, Aeroplane, Merry Go Round, Whip, Caterpillar, The Hey Day, Scooter, Jig-Saw Thriller, Lindy Loop and Hilarity Hall.

Envelopes will also be found on the different rides in Kiddie Park, inside Paragon.

BOOT AND SHOE CODE TO BE REVISED

Washington, Aug. 29—A revised code of competition for the boot and shoe industry, submittedly tentatively last week, today was ordered rewritten by National Recovery Administrators. They indicated they would take direct action to hasten public hearing on a program to put idle shoe workers back at their benches.

The points in the code most objectionable to the recovery administration, it was reported, concerned the representation on the administrative agency to be established for the industry.

Vigorous opposition to the main price-fixing provisions of both the general retail and the retail drug codes was registered with the NRA by the consumers' advisory board.

The board contends, it is reported, that cost-plus price-fixing clauses, unfair trade practice provisions forbidding certain advertising claims, and the fixing of resale prices on trade-marked goods would result in gouging of consumers.

Operators and union leaders went into session to complete the details of an agreement made to bring the 400,000 employed bituminous coal miners of the nation under the National Recovery Act.

The signing of the code of fair competition within 24 hours was believed assured as the policy committee of the United Mine Workers, after a long session, decided to back the stand of union officers.

Administrator Johnson declined to reveal the terms of the agreement arrived at but it was learned from reliable sources that it called for a basic minimum daily pay of $4.60 in the northern Appalachian region with a 40-cent differential for southern West Virginia, eastern Kentucky and Tennessee.

HEAVY DAMAGE IN NEW STORM

The series of electrical storms and cloudbursts which took one life and caused thousands of dollars' damage in Massachusetts and southern New England passed out to sea today, according to ten official weatherman at the Federal building.

He reported rainfall at Nantucket about 9 a. m. but promised clear weather sometime late today. The temperature was 57 at 10 a. m. as compared with 81 at the same time yesterday.

The victim of the storms was Ovilla Turner, 31, of Charlton, who was killed by a bolt of lightning while sitting in his home. The house escaped damage.

The downpour flooded streets and cellars, tied up auto traffic and crippled electric light systems on the South Shore. In the Connecticut Valley hailstones destroyed thousands of dollars worth of tobacco crops.

At Nantasket more than 25,000 bathers were driven from the beach, and lightning struck in that section twice. The first bolt damaged a generator in Paragon Park, putting the electrically operated rides out of commission. A second hit the 125 foot incinerator at Whitehead but did little damage.

In Wilmington bolts set a gasoline truck afire, and in Roslindale skipped freakishly around a trolley car containing 20 passengers.

Bar's Theatre Bell :-: Set For Repeal

TING-A-LING. TIME'S UP!

BILL WAITS ON REPEAL VOTE

From Texas to Boston is a far cry. But from Texas, which went wet on Saturday, to the other necessary states of the repealing 36, won't be long now.

That at least, is the opinion of Parker Shannon, who for nearly 40 years has been catering to the public from the same old stand in Avery st.

Parker's little handy device, the bell from the Tremont Theatre to his bar, is ready and willing to go. In the old days, the bell awakened many a goodfellow leaning against the bar, with the warning that it was two minutes before curtain time.

Well, the bell is re-attached. Mike Connors is on the business end at the theatre. When repeal becomes an actuality, the customers will hear its tinkle and dash from Parker's to their theater seats.

SOUNDING THE SIGNAL THAT IT'S TIME TO GO
Two minutes before curtain, in pre-prohibition days patrons of Shannon's bar on Avery st. timed their last rounds accurately between acts and before the show through the convenient bell attached to the Tremont Theater, which sounded the warning signal. The bell is attached, ready for repeal. Michael Connors, old-time attache of the theater, lets the customers know the time.

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

This Is Life

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

I wish I understood about Gen. O'Duffy and his fascist Blue Shirts, whom President De Valera has forbidden to parade in uniform under threat of prosecution for treason. I can't even be sure of the general's name. The Boston papers call him Owen, but the New York papers call him, very classily, Eoin, which sounds a little as if he had been set up by a hurried linotypist and that his name really ought to be General Etaoin Shrdlu O'Duffy.

Gen. O'Duffy apparently aspires to be the Mussolini or the Hitler of Ireland, to be the spear-head of the conservative Free State enemies of DeValera and the extremists who are still pressing for an Irish republic.

* * *

Gen. O'Duffy seems to have been disarmed, if not silenced, without very much trouble, but it is obvious that the old tragic war between the two parties who differ in their views as to Ireland's position in regard to England still seethes below the surface. Cosgrave and De Valera are civilized and intelligent statesmen, but they cannot always control their partisans, some of whom, apparently, are always ready to involve their countrymen in that most terrible of conflicts, guerilla civil warfare.

This impression is very strong upon me, as I have just finished reading a very terrible book. It is by the radical realist, Lyam O'Flaherty, and is called "The Martyr" (Macmillan). It deals with the days of about a decade ago, when the armed forces of the Free State were engaged in mopping up the last irreconcilable bands of Republicans. On both sides men had stood and fought together in the Easter Rebellion of 1916, had fought the unmentionable Black and Tans, but now that the Free State had been established the hatred between the two groups was greater than their common hatred for England, and their warfare was horrible.

Nothing could be more likely to dispel any lingering notion one may have of the old romantic Ireland, the Ireland of Dion Boucicault's comedies and John McCormack's songs and Donn Byrne's tales, than the modern Irish literature of James Joyce and James Stevens and Liam O'Flaherty and the other writers of the new Ireland. It is a terrible place they describe, a place where terrible things are done.

* * *

What O'Flaherty is trying to say in his tragic book is that the fanatics in both parties are wearing themselves out trying to destroy one another, to the profit of England's power, and that the real, practical patriots, who respect but do not hate their opposites, are inclined to let the whole struggle as a bad job. Incidentally, O'Flaherty and his spokesmen have only the bitterest contempt for the "Yankees," as they call the American Irish who from a safe distance stir up trouble or go over to get themselves involved in matters which they do not understand and can only make worse.

The novel tells of two Republicans, Crosbie, a mystical fanatic, and his Lieutenant Tracy, a hard-bitter professional soldier who is fighting to establish a communist republic and has the bitterest contempt for Crosbie's religious dream of a Catholic holy war.

Tracy attempts to ambush "Crackers" Sheehan and a mopping up detachment of Free State troops. He fails, is wounded and has to flee to the hills with his girl. The Free Staters capture the Republican town and garrison. Crosbie, already half-mad and inspired by a young aristocratic woman who calls herself "the dark Rosaleen" and is a much feared and hated trouble-maker, refuses any reasonable offer to stop the fighting and accept the status quo. He dreams of a country-wide Catholic revolution against the Dublin government and England.

He falls into the hands of one Tyson, also a fanatic on the Free State side, known as a ruthless torturer and killer in his determination to clean up the countryside and establish this Free State power.

* * *

The climax of the book shows two contrasting pictures. The professional soldier Sheehan hunts down his old comrade Tracy, talks things over with him and hides him where he will be safe. He will abandon the war. He sees no good in it, only ugly, futile suffering, because the Irish will not make peace among themselves and organize against the common enemy.

But the fanatic soldier Tyson, maddened by the intransigence of the fanatic mystic Crosbie, drags him out to a lonely place, crucifies him and burns him with a tin of gasoline. Crosbie accepting his fate joyfully, determined to be a martyr for Ireland. The book ends on that note, very horribly.

The whole story is written with tremendous seriousness and sense of fact. The reader feels that if it did not happen either things very like it must have happened and that O'Flaherty knows all about them and revolts against them. The book is a great cry of protest.

That is why the Gen. O'Duffy matter, though it may appear a little comic on the surface, may have depths in it which are not too pretty to look into. "She's the most distressful country . . . ."

HITLER'S BOOK TELLS WHY HE FIGHTS JEWS

Following is the fifth of six articles analyzing the first seven months of the Hitler regime in Germany, its successes and failures.

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1933, by International News Service)

Berlin, Aug. 29 (INS)—The outside world, hearing of the anti-Jewish policy of the National Socialist Government and shuddering at the tales of persecution and privation suffered by Jews in Germany, asked in horrified tones, "why?"

The answer is found in Hitler's life story, "My Fight"; in speeches of Nazi leaders, and in conversations with ordinary members of the Nazi party. Perhaps the anti-Jewish policy began one day in October, 1916, when Hitler after being wounded by a shell splinter at the front, was sent to a Berlin hospital to recuperate.

"SICK WITH FURY"

Later he walked about the streets of Berlin. He saw things which made him sick with fury. He found slackers running the shops or planted in safe government posts. He discovered, he declares, that most of these were Jews.

His resentment rose to a burning flame that has never been quenched. Again tossed into the maelstrom of battle, he was once more wounded—this time a victim of mustard gas (October 4, 1918). His convalescence was long and he had little to do but reflect. The National Socialist party was born in his consciousness during that time.

The war over, he found additional fuel for the fires of anti-Semitic hatred which still burned within him.

"I saw the offices, the shops, full of Jews," he cries. ("My Fight") "while war veterans were starving."

BELIEVED BY FOLLOWERS

Hitler says he believed Germany's life-blood was being poisoned by the Jewish racial strain. Ever since then one of his chief aims has been the extermination of Jewry in Germany. He has quoted in speeches a remark made by Johann Gottlieb Fichte in 1793.

"A powerful hostile state is spreading over Europe. It presses the citizens heavily. It is the Jewish people."

His followers believed with him that nearly all the economic ills suffered by Germany in after-war days were caused by Jews. Recently as May 19, 1933, Hitler asked:

"Shall I let thousands of Germans be crushed in order to let all Jews work and live in luxury while millions of our own people starve, become desperate, and fall victims to Bolshevism?"

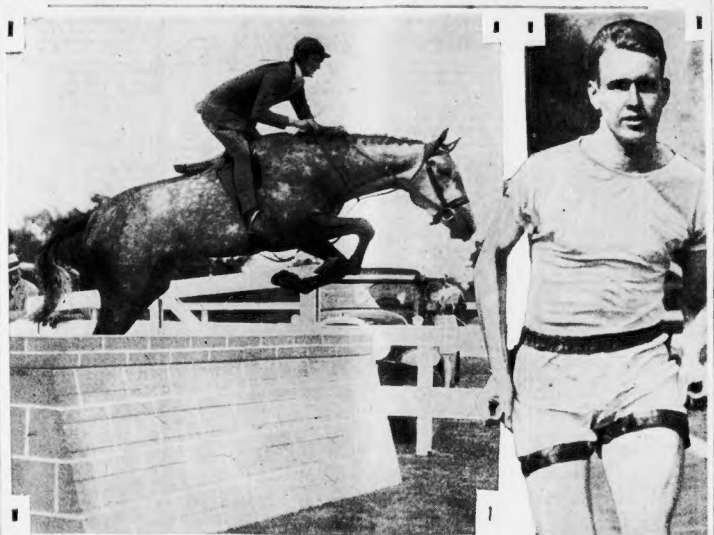
Choate Girl's Betrothal -:- Links Noted Old Families



HIGH JUMPER WON BY HARVARD RUNNER

Priscilla Choate, granddaughter of the diplomat and daughter of the Joseph Choates of New York, whose engagement to Norwood Penrose Hallowell, Jr.—"Pen" Hallowell while a track star at Harvard—is told of today by Cholly Knickerbocker. He is from Milton and is now a student at Oxford, having been graduated from Harvard last year. The bride-to-be is shown on Fion McCool taking a jump at the Westchester, N. Y., County Horse Show.

'Pen' Hallowell, Track Star, to Wed N. Y. Deb

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, Aug. 29—In all New York there is scarcely a name that carries more distinction than that of Choate.

The Joseph Choates are so conservative and so strangely devoid of the fad for self advertising as to be almost eccentric in this day of high powered publicity, both social and commercial.

They allow a few exceptions in their conservative social code—an engagement, a marriage or a debutante in the family—and I am asked today to announce what I consider one of the most distinguished betrothals in society.

Priscilla, it seems almost superfluous to add, is a grand-daughter of that celebrated gentleman, the late Joseph H. Choate, who served as former ambassador to the court of St. James.

Her grandmother, Mrs. Choate, who died at the ripe old age of 92, was for many years identified with the social life of Stockbridge, Mass., and her aunt, Mabel Choate, one of the richest spinsters in society, devotes much of her time to charitable work.

Priscilla is marrying a Harvard man, young Hallowell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Penrose Hallowell of Milton, Mass., was graduated from the university on the Charles river in 1932, after "prepping" at Milton Academy and is at present studying at Oxford University in England.

The future bridegroom is a grandson of the late Col. Norwood Penrose Hallowell of West Medford, Mass., and on his mother's side is a grandson of Alfred Bowditch, of Boston. No date has been set for the wedding.

In his petition Pouleur charged his father was incompetent to handle the estate from which there is an annual income of $7500.

French Near Victory in War With Berbers

CONTEST LOOMS OVER WILL

A contest was expected today of the will of the late T. Julius Silsby, former Brookline banker, who left his entire $33,000 estate to Dartmouth College.

In the will, filed for probate in Middlesex Court, Silsby who recently died in a Watertown nursing home, said he made no provision for his relatives because he did not consider them near.

They are first cousins, Mrs. Ida M. Ellis, of Plymouth and Mrs. Carrie Landregan, of Oakland, Cal.

The former banker asked that his estate be added to previous gifts to Dartmouth, for the erection of a building to be used for college purposes and to be known as Silsby Hall in memory of his grandfather, Orias Silsby, who graduated from Dartmouth in 1785.

Moley's 'Boss' 100 P. C. Roosevelt

Associated Press.

The venture that will take Prof. Raymond Moley out of public life will also bring William Vincent Astor into an entirely new sphere of activity.

The announcement that Moley was resigning as Assistant Secretary of State to edit a weekly publication was big news everywhere, but the simultaneous revelation that the 41-year-old descendant of Col. John Jacob Astor was to be the weekly's publisher was no less surprising.

Astor had shown no previous bent for journalism. But he is already immersed in plans for what he calls an "adventure in national journalism." A great friend and strong follower of President Roosevelt, Astor said he hoped the weekly would "consolidate the gains made generally by the administration," but that it would not be an organ of the NRA.

Astor was not 21 when he and his sister Muriel inherited the estate of his father estimated at $100,000,000. Two years later, just after his recovery from a serious illness, he married Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington.

Although his father was a victim of the sinking of the liner Titanic Astor did not feel any aversion toward the sea. His trips to Europe have been many.

In keeping with his love for the ocean Vincent sold his old yacht so that in 1927 he could purchase the Nourmahal. This boat, built in Germany, was said to have cost $600,000.

Astor also is an enthusiast of the air lanes and his experiences as a pilot have been numerous. Toy railroads have been an important interest in his life, and at his estate in Rhineback, N. Y., he maintained a mile and a half model railroad from which in 1929 he exhibited a locomotive 97 inches long at the New York Society of Model Engineers.

A year ago he took an active part in raising money for the Roosevelt campaign in his belief that Roosevelt "would be an inspiring leader."

Washington, Aug. 29—Robert Jackson of Concord, N. H., and Washington, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, has announced the impending marriage of his daughter, Mrs. Sarah Jackson Coonley, t. W. Forbes Morgan of New York and Washington.

O'CONNELL FOR BENCH REFORM

The appointment of judges was condemned by Joseph F. O'Connell, candidate for mayor of Boston, speaking at Grand Rapids, Mich., to delegates to the American Bar Association convention which opens tomorrow.

"Because of an insidious cabal which controlled appointments in Massachusetts," he said, "no governor up to 1911 was fair enough even to consider a Roman Catholic or any persons with Irish blood for the higher courts. True, the elective system is not perfect, but we lawyers are a dissatisfied lot and would grumble over any system. The voters make mistakes, but no more than would occur under a system whereby judges were picked in the secrecy of some chamber."

Nudist Colony Joke Played in Westport

Westport, Aug. 29—Apparently inspired by last week's practical joker at Carver, one of equal mentality gave police a quick run to the Cadmen's Neck section here on a report that a nudist colony was in session.

A sign was posted, even as one was posted at Carver last week—at the entrance to a dead end road. No nudists "fell," as they had at Carver.

LISTEN, WORLD!--DID WOMEN LEAVE KITCHEN FROM FEMALE PRIDE AND PERVERSITY?

Cold Facts Are Men Drove Them Out

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SHOULD WOMEN go back to the kitchen?"

"Big Ben" opined that they should. According to him, women workers, particularly married ones, were the real cause of the depression, and the millennium would come pronto if they were headed out of industry and herded back into their corner.

But—we wonder. So we passed his letter on; and we're still trying to dig out from under the comeback. The first mail brought 379 answers. Of these, 187 were for ousting ladies from jobs; the other 192 were for keeping them in! So then, what? Do these five odd votes prove anything? Fill in the answer for yourself.

Elsie Robinson

And while you're wrangling over that, give a thought to this point which no one brought up:

WHY DID WOMEN LEAVE THE KITCHEN?

Was it because of female pride and perversity?

The anti-feminists would have us believe that these are the reasons. But the cold facts of history tell a different story. Those facts show that—

WOMEN DIDN'T TAKE MEN'S JOBS, UNTIL—

WOMEN DIDN'T LEAVE THE KITCHEN, UNTIL—

MEN SHOVED THEM OUT OF IT!

AND IF WOMEN TODAY WENT BACK INTO THE KITCHEN AND DID THE WORK THEIR GRANDMOTHERS DID,

IT WOULD ROB HALF THE MEN OF WORK!

You don't believe it? Then figure it out for yourself. What did a woman do in the days when the kitchen was her empire?

SHE COOKED. She didn't just open a can or phone the grocer. She cooked everything—EVERYTHING her family ate.

SHE SEWED. She didn't just do a little embroidery; she particularly fine table cloth. She sewed everything her family used. Spun the thread; carded the wool; wove the cloth; bleached or dyed the finished product.

SHE WASHED. All of the laundry was done at home—WITHOUT "modern conveniences."

Nor are all these labor matters of very ancient history. Most of them were performed by this writer in her own home. Many of them are still being performed. (Believe it or not, I'm going from this article to put up blackberry jam and cut out a new plaid dress for Lee!)

In short, until the last thirty years a woman's home was not only a social center, but a BIG BUSINESS. And a housewife was Important Citizen No. 1.

Then why did they stop making those records?

MEN ARE WHY.

Who is doing the cooking and canning today? Who has taken over the sewing and laundry work? Who is busy building the "modern conveniences" which have displaced hand work—the tiny apartments which have replaced the "old fashioned home?"

MEN.

And why are men doing these things? Was it because women laid down on the job? It was not. It was because—

MEN FOUND PROFIT IN DOING THEM. MEN TURNED HOUSEWORK INTO MONEY. SO MEN TURNED HOUSEKEEPERS.

AND NOW THEY'RE BEEFING BECAUSE WOMEN HAVE TURNED CLERKS!

Which leaves women just where? YOU tell 'em!

School Schedule Ires Parents

Melrose high school pupils and parents are planning to protest the new schedule for pupils of the new senior high school, announced by Superintendent of Schools Herbert H. Stuart as from 8:15 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Previously the hours have been from 8 a. m. to 1 p. m. No change in elementary schools hours is contemplated.

The Melrose high school will be dedicated Sept. 8. On the following day the school will be open for inspection by pupils. All school sessions resume Sept. 11. The former high school will be used as a grammar school. Sewall and Livermore grammar schools will be abandoned.

Pierce Fiance's Bridal to Be "Last"

New York, Aug. 26—When Marian Hughes Whitehead, who divorced "Conky" Whitehead, southern millionaire, last Thursday, walks up the aisle with Andrew Pierce, 3d, in the near future, it will be positively her last appearance at the altar.

"No more marriages," said the pretty young society matron today, and added:

"I intend to stay married this time. There won't be any divorce. I will have a real home and settle down and raise a family."

Lace Leads in Revival

RICH FABRIC are coming to light again in what promises to be a most luxurious season. Nothing seems as important at the moment as the revival of elegance. Often it is the fabric that lends the much-desired elaboration this year.

Taffetas, novelty velvets, metal cloths and fabrics with metal threads running through them will be important. Shiny surfaces are good—and, in the case of dull fabrics, the importance of ornamentation is highly magnified. (Paillettes, jewelled fastenings, shiny placques—these are the bold touches that add the necessary emphasis instead.) Odd pieces of family brocade will be cut into blouses for dark suits. Fur is often used like fabric.

Velvety woolens and considerable tulle (sometimes striped in velvet) are two revivals. The first for daytime, the second for evening. To tell you in a nutshell, fabrics are of paramount importance. A good thing to remember is that when you buy your next dress the beauty of the material should sway you as much as any other factor.

However, in spite of a sea of countless new fabric faces, lace—that hardy perennial—remains with us. Since nothing in fashion ever stands still, it too has gone through a rejuvenation. A few laces have polished surfaces that gleam like metal. If the lace is dull-surfaced, paillettes and shiny beads often supply an unexpected bit of glitter.

Some laces are dusky in tone, others have more definite color tendencies. Some remind you of wines. Certain greys now being used make you think of marcasite! The browns are deep and rich, like expensive woods. Quantities of black laces are seen, as always, although for novelty, laces in a very unusual bright violet and purplish red are making their appearance, too. These are perfectly charming.

The gown in the sketch is copper in color—quite like a shining suit of armor. This gown is faithful to the newest edict that fashion emphasis is below, instead of above, the shoulders. See how the eye is drawn directly between the elbow and shoulder.

Varied accessory possibilities suggest themselves for this gown. For instance, a satin bag, gloves and shoes that match the gown in color. Again, the same accessories in suede, also matching the dress in color. Sometimes a delicate gradation in tone can be accomplished by having accessories in a slightly darker tone than the dress. A feather capelet would be effective to accompany the dress, but this must be chosen with extreme care. Otherwise, too much fussiness could easily "kill" a perfect dinner costume.

Thousands Enjoy -:- American Outing

Several thousand mothers and children again enjoyed an excursion and outing sponsored by the Boston Evening American. The Nantasket Steamboat Co. took the mothers and their little ones down the harbor to Nantasket Beach. Paragon Park was the spot for the outing and they enjoyed the fun at the various amusements. Next Sunday the Boston Evening American will stage a Treasure Hunt in Paragon Park.

Voice of Broadway

Snapshots at Random!

There is an old-world quaintness about that part of Manhattan which you strike as you come rolling down the end of Washington Bridge—high up on the cliffs are those stately buildings, almost like the Parthenon at a lightning glimpse and down below toward your right the Hudson, refulgent under the sun and beautifully alive with small and large craft.

The impression vanishes as you hit the traffic jam—but the beauty of the Hudson lingers to the end of the ride—it's at your side as a reminder . . . Thursday night, with much misgivings, for I have fought shy of hotel roofs this season, I drift into the St. Morits Sky Gardens—and from a columnistic viewpoint am amply rewarded by spottin, at a terrace table three interesting folk—interesting in that the three are amicably together . . . Don Francesco Caravita, Prince di Sirignano, otherwise the eight-or-nine days' husband of Janet Snowden, who left him after five days—Caravita, I say, with Marian Snowden (Janet's sister) and Marian's Prince Rospigliosi, which may or may not indicate that a reconciliation is being arranged . . . The suavest comic of them all, Julius Tannen, is present and a handsome, gray-haired gent, Herbert Rawlinson, of the films nd stage tells a rather antiquated story but smiles so it doesn't count . . .

Early Thursday evening to what I thought was to be an intimate little supper for a few of us at the penthouse of A. J. Powers, only to discover that from 200 to 300 other peopls probably thought so, too . . . Here, I meet for the first time one of Broadway's favorite priests, although his parish is in Jersey—Father Joe O'Connor, songwriter by avocation ("God Sends a Little Gift of Roses" among others) and here, too, for the first time since her elopement, I met Gilda Gray, who forgot her aesthetic aspirations and squirms into an old-time shimmy and torso-twisting that brings back memories of the days when nobody knew, or cared particularly, that Gilda Gray could sing . . . Through it all grins Boris Morros, the Paramount executive, who has one of those odd names I've always envied . . . Sheila Barrett mimicks Zasu Pitts and a gentleman with a splendid voice, James Mellon, sings, as do also a Miss Padulia and a Miss Hildegarde . . . Sing exceptionally well . . . I am very much in favor of these intimate parties on roof-tops on these dull nights—particularly when someone else conducts them and foots the bills.

Tuesday night on Seventh ave. near 53rd st. . . . A bent old white-haire' fellow shuffling along the street with a ventriloquist's dummy under his arm, "doing his act" as he moves along . . . People turn to stare and to grin, but no one hands the old fellow a coin . . . At 55th st. we stop him and suggest he stand at the corner and do his act . . . "The cops chase me," he complains . . . It's the first time we've ever encountered this type of street entertainment . . .

Somewhere between these night club wanderings I find time to attend the opening of "Love and Babies" at the Cort Tuesday night and, although a gentleman for whom I have the deepest affection, Morris Green, is one of the producers, I find it impossible to say anything gracious about the play and must dismiss it as one of the summer season's accidents . . . In between acts I study three gentlemen standing together near the curb . . . Three physicians, Drs. Lempert, Michel and Wagner, one or the other of whom, if not all three, you will invariably find present on opening nights. Monday night at the Simplon, where Larry Siry's orchestra greets me with "Melancholy Baby," for which I suppose and hope I am truly grateful . . . Later at the Hollywood, where the four songsters from the Coast are present, namely, Elsie Ferguson, 2d; Bryant Washburn, Jr.; Eric Von Stroheim, Jr., and Carlyle Blackwell, Jr. Friday, I lure Dr. Nathaniel Lief away from his song-writing activities and we drive into the mountains to the place known as Grossingers'—to escape Broadway, as we laffingly insist—but when we get there Broadway greets us at the gate in the persons of the three Ritz brothers, Dave of the Blue Room, Nat Kramer, owner of the Edison, and half a dozen dimpsey lights . . . There is no escape. Snapshots . . . The Album of Manhattan.

New Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

FOR YOUR OWN WARDROBE:

Miladie!—do not try to be too severe, since it is not necessary to be smart, nor too young since there are equally good modes not quite so demanding. Don't let yourself be persuaded to wear the simple tailored coat if your neck and shoulders won't back it up. Remember that the coat tailored and fur trimmed at neck and cuffs is to be most popular this season.

Miss Nancy Faxon, fair haired and lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Faxon, is looking particularly charming at the moment in a gay little red and white sport ensemble with a wide brimmed sailor hat banded in red and a snappy red handbag to match the ensemble. Her close fitting white satin evening frock is especially lovely, and not forgetting that flowers are in vogue she wears a soft pink satin rose as a colorful touch.

Mrs. Horace Drinkwater of Cohasset is a smartly dressed matron who keeps abreast of the fashions. Her good looking black lace evening dress attracted much attention the other evening at the South Shore Players clever performance "Survival."

Mrs. Malcolm B. French, always strikingly gowned, wore a charming beige and green creation—incidentally Mrs. French has a perfect figure for the prevailing modes of the opening season.

Miss Ada Dewson is still helping to make the South Shore Players a success, her charming manner and constant interest have been outstanding. Her frock of delicate green was most becoming to her dark coloring.

Benefit Bridge Party at Home of Mrs. Thomas Bilodeau

MRS. THOMAS BILODEAU OPENS HER attractive home on Natasco ave., Hull for a bridge and whist matinee, this afternoon to benefit the fund for Vacation House Donation Day, which will be on September 2. A delightful afternoon has been planned and there are many attractive and useful prizes.

The committee under the direction of Mrs. Frazier O'Leary, Mrs. C. G. Flynn, Dr. Mary Moore Beatty, Mrs. James Grines, Mrs. William Johnston and Mrs. Charles Reynolds arranged to meet the guests at the boat. Miss Irene Bilodeau and Miss Mary Beatty are two of the younger group who will assist in the scoring.

The Sands Hill home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bailey at Scituate, has been the scene of a gay house party over the week end, where Miss Eleanor and Miss Mary Bailey, fair young daughters of the house, are hostesses to a group from out of town. Among the guests are the Misses Rachel Cassidy of West Roxbury; Margaret Dallas of Roxbury; Mary Duane of Newton; Alice Gallagher of Brighton, and Catherine Butler of West Roxbury.

ACHIEVING WITH ALACRITY THE BUSINESS GIRL'S DAILY METAMORPHOSIS

By Therese Deschamps

LOOK THEM OVER, these smart young business women Here they are, fresh as the daisies, dining and dancing at seventhirty in perfect frocks, and no one would ever know that at a quarter to six they were picking up what energy they had left after a busy day and trying to make the subway on second.

There seems to be a simple system most of them follow which transforms them so magically from efficient machines into bewitching damsels. First step toward turning into a moth of the evening: take off the shoes, do what walking is necessary so nature originally intended: then peel off the street clothes. Cream the face, neck and hands as if you were going to swim the English Channel: pour the most refreshing bath oil you possess into the tub and follow them in

Wonder Creams

After you get the layer of cream off—you so generously put on a few minutes previously and have scrubbed with your favorite bath brush until the skin glows and tingles with new life—then, if your face needs a pick-me-up, there are creams which you don't want to use every day of your life, but they work wonders when you need that extra fresh look—if you know what we mean.

One of that variety of revitalizers I favor a little over your face while you relax in your tub and is removed just before you step forth into the folds of a huge soft towel to rub yourself dry.

Now for a few pats of Eau de Cologne, a little cloud of bath powder with a large down puff, a little nourishing cream to soften the skin—and fifteen minutes stretched out flat on your back with every muscle in your body relaxed and the brain turned off. An alarm clock will get you up if you can slip into a few minutes of complete oblivion.

Then up you dear—with a bound. Wipe off the cream with astringent, put on your eyeshadow for the candle light, rouge and powder so that you look dewy fresh and charmingly natural—a wisp about hose, frivolous high heels and the daintiest of underthings—then the frock

Rested and Ready

And just as you grab your evening wrap the bell should announce your escort. How is that for timing—and there you are, rested and ready to compete with this year's loveliest debutantes.

But, like cinderella, my dear, you should run to your bed at the stroke of 12, and at least two evenings every week you should tuck in no later than 10 o'clock and get your beauty sleep.

The trade name of the toilet preparations alluded to in the article above will be sent you if you wish. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request, please. RADIANT STAR OF THE EVENING

"If I could be like that," you breathe. You can. This is Katharine Hepburn, star of "Morning Glory" at Keith's. In reality she's a freckle-faced miss with her feature good from an idealist's point of view. But she's brimming with personality, exquisitely groomed, and refreshingly different. She lifts what beauty she possesses to it's full value. Look at her chin. Would not that inspire you to pat and pummel and beat yours back to that firm, strong youthfulness that is hers?

This Shower in Poor Taste

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

1—I have been married for four years and have been living with my mother-in-law. I am going a housekeeping soon and she wants to have a shower for me. Is this proper? If so, kindly write an invitation that is appropriate.

2—Many of my friends have given me wedding presents and I would like to know if it would be proper to invite them and display the presents?

ANN

1—I wish that I could tell you that I am enthusiastic about this plan, for I am sure that is what you would like to have me say. But it does seem very forced to me, a party with the one idea of gift-bringing, and I don't think it would be in good taste. However, of course, the final decision about this sort of thing rests with those most concerned.

2—To my taste, the best and most gracious thing for you to do would be to wait until you are really settled in your new home, with the wedding presents arranged there as you would use them, and then invite your friends to a "housewarming." In this way the presents would be delightfully displayed.

Basic Sponge for Rolls

Add ¼ cup of cold water to ½ cup of scalded milk. When lukewarm add 1-3 yeastcake, 2 tsps. of sugar and 1 cup of bread flour. Beat with egg beater until smooth. Set in a warm place to rise until light and fluffy, about 3 hours or over-night in a cool place. Bread flour must always be used with yeast.

Several cupfuls of sponge can be mixed at once and 2 or 3 types of rolls made. For interest graham flour can be added to 1 cup of sponge to make graham muffins while to another cupful, eggs, sugar and spice can be stirred in to make sweet rolls.

The temperature is important in bread-making. If the dough is kept in too hot an atmosphere, the yeast will be killed, while too low temperature prevents the yeast from growing. 65 to 70 degrees F. is the proper temperature for bread rising overnight.

For effective daytime results, 80 degrees F. is best. The rolls must double in bulk every time they rise, which will take about 60 minutes. If you must hasten the rising, double the amount of yeast.

Parker House Rolls

Delicious Parker House Rolls are made by adding to one cupful of the basic sponge one well-beaten egg, 1 tbsp. sugar, ½ tsp. of salt, 2½ cups of bread flour and 2 tbsps. of butter or shortening.

Knead on a floured board until elastic. Let rise an hour. When double in bulk, roll out ¾-inch thick, cut with a biscuit cutter. Crease through the middle of each roll with a dull side of the knife. Brush over with melted butter, fold and press the edges together. Place on a greased muffin pan, cover and let rise. Bake 20 minutes in a 400 deg. F. oven.

The popular clover leaf rolls are made from the Parker House roll dough. When the dough is double in bulk, it will shape into balls about an inch in diameter. Three of these are dropped into each section of a greased muffin pan.

Then the dough is brushed with melted fat and the rolls are left to rise and then baked in the same temperature as the Parker House rolls. This Parker House roll dough also makes delicious salad rolls and bread sticks. The dough is rolled out and shaped with a biscuit cutter and then rolled out on the hand. For bread sticks, the strip of dough should be about 8 inches long.

Many Varieties of Better Biscuits for Hot Days

By MARTHA LEE

WHILE I AGREE that for the average homemaker it's wasted time, strength and fuel to bake bread this weather, when so many varieties of wholesome, homey bakers' bread beckons from the street grocers, occasions do come up when we want to put our best foot forward and then we can make biscuits as good or better than "the kind that mother used to make." Then it is that you'll be glad to have on hand today's recipes for better biscuits.

A basic sponge from which many varieties of rolls can be produced is easily made. One cup of sponge is sufficient for fourteen rolls and here are the ingredients therein:

"Heartburn" is the name ... that peculiar burning ... felt in the ... of the stomach, or in the area around the heart. There is burning in the throat, too. There is no actual pain but the sensation is distressing. It is usually the result of gas formation in the stomach with distension and pressure of the stomach against the heart.

It is a signal that should not be ignored. It may be the result of overeating, or of too rapid eating. It is commonly seen in men and women who rush through their meals, bolt their food and fail to chew it properly.

Her Problem Is the Children

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I quit school to get married and now I wish I hadn't. I've got two lovely babies—both boys. Their father doesn't care whether they eat or not; he likes to drink too well. I'm trying to get some sl...ance for them through the courts. In my place would you put the boys in a home for a while or would you put them in an institution where they'd be cared for ... time?

Dear Mother: The nursery would be my choice in your place my dear. You would then have you children with you evenings and would not miss all their adorable ways during those precious hours. They are all too soon. If you put them in an institution you hardly mean more to them than the lady who came on visiting days.

The [illegible] mother, Mrs. Joseph Bradford Carr, of Canton, [illegible] has asked Canadian police to find her daughter.

Officials declined to comment on what procedure could be taken to deport a girl who had entered a convent.

Silence shrouded other aspects of the case. Chief Jargail of Quebec provincial police shrugged his shoulders when asked why he does not tell the family where Miss Carr is, if her whereabouts are known to him. Miss Carr could have protection if she needed it, he said.

The Rev. Mother Marie Sainte Jeanne De Val is superior of the mother house of the Sisters of Presentation of Mary, St. Hyacinthe, where Miss Carr visited, said.

"I state finally and most emphatically that Natalie Carr is not in any of our convents either in the United States or Canada."

The mother superior dismissed the theory that Natalie's desire to enter the convent might be the result of being crossed in love. She said:

"Knowing Miss Carr as I do exceedingly well, for she was a student in this convent eight years, I feel justified in saying that there is no foundation for such a surmise."

Reaching Quebec Premier Taschereau, acting as attorney general, consulted the file on Natalie Carr and announced all information in the possession of the police had been given her parents.

THAT'S your assurance of uniformly healthful and deliciously wholesome beer.

Good beer cannot be made by the rule of thumb. If that were true, anyone could make good beer. Malt, hops, yeast and water are available to all.

But without enzyme control there can be no good beer—no matter who makes it—skilled or unskilled.

At SCHLITZ, brewing is an exact science. Harmful light rays are screened out—air is washed—temperatures are scientifically controlled—ageing tanks are scrupulously clean—every pipe and pump is sterilized.

Brewing is stopped at a split second, for at that instant, fermentation is complete under SCHLITZ secret enzyme control—the most sensational development in the brewing industry.

SCHLITZ is a predigested food because it is brewed under perfect enzyme control. It will not ferment in your stomach nor cause indigestion. It is healthful, wholesome and of a full-bodied, ripe flavor.

The Brown Bottle protects its goodness from the brewery to your glass. Drink it freely and enjoy it with full confidence that it is good and good for you.

OPERATOR 13 -:- -:- By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Read This First

Gail Loveless, young as she was—just 20—had had a thorough training as a character actress under the tutelage of her accomplished friend and fellow artist of the professional stage, Pauline Cushman. Miss Cushman had served as a spy for the Union Army. Now it was necessary for her to go again into the Confederate lines at Martinsburg, Va. Gen. J. E. B. Stuart needed watching. It was feared he intended to lead his reckless, gray-jacketed riders into Pennsylvania on a devastating raid.

Miss Cushman asked if she might take Gail Loveless with her. Pinkerton, head of the Federal secret service, and his aide, Colonel Sharpe, seeing the younger girl impersonate an octoroon, were convinced of her ability to fool the Southerners. They said she might go and assigned to her, as an agent of the secret service, the number 13, which had been borne by another spy, recently captured by the Southern army and hanged.

A few days later Gail Loveless, as Lucille Lyndon, "yaller gal" laundress, had the good luck to be assigned to the headquarters of Gen. Stuart himself. And there, while she washed a shirt in a swift little river, came Capt. Jack Gailliard, foremost of Gen. Stuart's spies, to flirt with her lazily in the mellow sunshine. He kissed her and was ashamed of the thrill it gave him. Shortly afterwards Pauline Cushman was arrested as a spy. Operator 13 refused to flee and save herself when a man spy offered her the chance to go. Pauline was condemned to be hanged, but Operator 13, slashing the prison tent with a knife, set her free and she escaped. Operator 13 was "loaned," as laundress, by Gen. Stuart to Belle Boyd, most famous Confederate spy. Miss Boyd, completely deceived, told Gailliard that the girl was harmless. Gailliard was relieved, but his colleague, Vesperian Chancellor, remained suspicious. He said he had an "instinct" in such matters. The girl stole Gailliard's horse and fled, after striking him with her revolver. Riding to the shore she met a man who gave her the correct secret service passwords.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

He wore the uniform of a Confederate cavalryman. She unpinned the white rose from her handkerchief, handed it to him.

"It's this petal," she whispered, touching it with her finger tip. "It's pinned fast."

"You are Augustus Littlefield?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am."

"You have your pass and furlough?"

"No, ma'am. I ride over with Hampton's horse. My contact is Operator 17 in Mercersbury."

"Mrs. Edmunds?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Tell her to hurry."

"I will, ma'am."

That was all.

Operator 13 watched horse and rider continuing their soundless course across the grass. When they had disappeared, she turned back toward the house. After a little way she came again into the orchard, and stopped there frightened.

For there was a light in her bedroom window. Across it, now and then, passed the phantom figure of a man.

Then, in the deadly danger of the moment, she felt that strange, warm charm of peril flow in her veins.

She looked up at her lighted window. Two wavering shadows moved on wall and ceiling—a man's and a woman's. Once the man's face was illumined by the candle. He was Vespasian Chancellor! Then the woman moved into the light for a moment. It was Belle Boyd.

DESPERATE FLIGHT FROM DEATH

"Capt. Gailliard, white as death in the starlight, caught the horse's head. She swung the heavy pistol by the barrel and struck him full in the face with all her might. He crumpled up without a sound." Operator 13 has erred.

Her disguise has been penetrated. She is revealed as a spy and her life is forfeit. Trapped in the very midst of an enemy army, she seizes the one desperate chance that remains to her.

Chancellor came to the open window presently and called down to somebody she could not see. "She's skedaddled, suh. But there's enough skin dye in this hyar washbowl to tell the story!"

Oh, God! She had forgotten to empty the washbowl! She had taken every possible precaution except this!

DAMNING EVIDENCE

"My hands is fast brown already," said Chancellor, "and dry's a bleached bone! She ain't no nigger, suh. She's operator thirteen. I reckon my instinct was right, suh. This hyar washbowl is more'n enough to damn an' hang her!"

For a moment her limbs, body, brain and blood turned to ice, then that strange warmth stole through her again.

She stooped low and crept along the fence under the honeysuckle until she came to the tied horse. Strapped to the cantle was a long gray military overcoat.

With trembling fingers she unbuckled the straps, unrolled it, got into it, pulled her slouch hat low over her face, untied the horse, climbed into the saddle and freed the pistol from its holster.

In the act of drawing it out she suddenly saw Capt. Gailliard beside her, white as death in the starlight. He caught the horse's head, she swung the heavy pistol by the barrel and struck him full in the face with all her might.

He crumpled without a sound, his convulsive fingers dragging the horse's head down with him to the wet grass.

She stared down at him. His face were a scarlet mask of blood. Then with a sob she jerked the [illegible] rein out of his nerveless fingers, touched the horse with knee and heel, guiding him out into the fog, where lay her only hope of life.

The river was invisible, but its flowing could be heard under darkly drifting mist. Scarcely a sound from the waiting regiments, muffled tinkle of spurs; now and then a soft clash of sabers on stirrupirons metallic stirrings of hoofs on stones.

"Yes. I'm scared. But I'll be cooler in a moment."

"No."

"Shoot him, or hawg-stick him, ma'am?"

"No. I hit him in the face with his own pistol and rode off on his horse. If it gets much lighter down here, somebody may recognize Capt. Gailliard's horse. Or notice the color of my face."

"We're going through in a few minutes, ma'am. Keep cool."

"Oh, God," she whispered, "why don't they hurry!"

Operator 99, who was Federal spy Augustus Littlefield, wearing a white rose on a Confederate uniform of the Second South Carolina Cavalry, laid a [illegible] hand on the frightened girl's shoulder.

"Ma'am, we'll both hang if we're caught. We know that. So we better try to forget it and do our duty ca'm and quiet."

BETRAYING STAIN

"Yes," whimpered the girl, "but I can't wash off this dark stain on my skin; and if they see a nigger in Confederate uniform it will be the end of me."

"Ma'am," said Littlefield, "when the scouts start out across the ford there'll be firing. You start, too, leading your hoss. And jest as soon as you git to the shore, mount and ride like hell." He added, "If you're shot in the back it's better than dancin' the sunset jig, ma'am."

"Yes, it is. I'll try to get through somehow," she murmured. She straightened her shoulder and lifted her head defiantly, but it was an effort. She said "And you'll try to make contact with Operator 17 in Mercersburg, won't you?"

"I will, ma'am, if God lets me."

"It's Mrs. Edmonds, isn't it?" she asked. She knew, but she was trying to regain self-command.

"Yes, ma'am."

"Tell her I'll keep on to Chambersburg and telegraph across to the colonel of the Sixth Lancers at Frederick," said the girl nervously.

Again Gus Littlefield laid a kindly paw on her quivering arm. "Courage, ma'am. You got a plenty. I seen you giggle at death. You been in worse pickles nor this. Me, too. We don't dance no sunset jig this time. No ma'am. When the rebel rush begins git onto your ole nag and ride like a devil!"

ALL RAGGED

A moment's [illegible] silence, then he climbed [illegible] into his saddle and started off towards the road where the cavalry were waiting in close column. As he rode he pulled the white rose from his buttonhole, stuffed it into his breeches pocket and took his place in the ranks, leaving Federal Secret Service Operator 13 alone in the middle of a Confederate division where, disguised as a Negro laundress, she had been known to almost every man in the camp.

Now in the dawn dusk which was turning the fog pallid, her pretty brown-tinted face was not visible in the shade of her slouch hat's brim. Even her overcoat and spurred boots would attract no attention because, although new uniforms had arrived from Richmond for some of the cavalry, the Confederate horsemen, en masse, were still somewhat ragged after Antietam, and any kind of clothing was gratefully worn.

But the girl was in extreme danger. If Capt. Jack Gailliard of the Confederate secret service had been too severely hurt by her to follow her, nevertheless Vespasian Chancellor, the cleverest of Confederate operators and chief of scouts, was now searching for her high and low. He knew, too, that she had ridden off on Gailliard's own horse.

She did not know what to do to escape him. She dared not try to join a cavalry regiment and edge into column on the ford road back there among the oaks. She dared not attempt to join Phillips scouts, even in the river fog.

From where she stood at her horse's head, among the willows, she could see a camp sergeant and two led horses waiting and she recognized the horses as Lady Margrave and Skylark, two favorite mounts of General Jeb Stuart. In that case, she realized with a pang of fright, the mounted camp servant must be Yellow Bob, Stuart's body servant, who so often had hectored and bullied her and bragged about his importance.

Here was a new and deadly danger a few paces away, if Yellow Bob recognized her he would give the alarm—that is, if he had heard what she had done.

That biggity mulatto Yaller Bob! She had fooled him a dozen times a day! She would do it again. She would do more—she would make a fool of him and steal his horses—General J. E. B. Stuart's two favorite horses, Lady Margrave and Skylark!

At the mere idea all the clever, reckless sense of humor in the girl deliciously suffused her. Death grinned at her [illegible].

Now all the [illegible] in the girl was in confident and controlled ascendency. If she revealed herself to the mulatto, he might not have heard that she had been unmasked as a spy.

It was possible that this news had not reached Yellow Bob, or perhaps, had not yet been carried to headquarters, with Chancellor and Belle Boyd galloping the mountain trails where Jackson's pickets had fired on her as she swung her horse toward headlong escape.

LONG CHANCE

It was a risk—a longer chance than her momentary safety seemed to warrant. The next instant she made up her mind; took her horse by the head and moved through the willows toward the spot where Yellow Bob sat his horse, hold-

SUCCESSFUL CAJOLERY

Yellow Bob was enormously flattered. That free darky beau of the camp, sought by every Negro and alas! by almost every white soldier in the division—should at the eleventh hour succumb to his personal charms filled him with immeasurable pride.

"Gor a-mighty!" he breathed, rolling his eyes at her and her horse. "Whar yuh git dose clothes, Lucille?" he asked.

"Yuh ain't seen dem boots no whar befo'?" she [illegible] when suddenly the first sp[illegible] [illegible] from the water's edge and, far in the fog, a pistol flashed.

The next instant she was in the saddle, riding [illegible] Yellow Bob. She could see Lieut. Phillips run out into the water followed by two dozen dismounted men all splashing toward the unseen shore beyond which now was belted with flashes like floating fireflies in the mist.

The crackle of pistol fire merged into a ragged, rattling volley from Federal rifles. With a roaring rush through the fog Wade Hampton's horsemen took to the water, followed by Hart's battery, the straining horses bounding forward through clouds of foam.

Across the river a fight was going on in the fog. Col. Butler's Second South Carolina horsemen closing with the Union pickets and vedettes saber against saber and bayonet. The fog was full of shouting, yells from galloping riders [illegible] directing officers [illegible] to roaring [illegible] dripping shot or [illegible] sound exchanged.

RIDING TO WARN

The Union pickets and vedettes had [illegible] killed, taken or scattered. [illegible] scampering hoofs of [illegible] horsemen and thunderous, thrashing gallop of Confederate cavalry through churned waters [illegible] to the riders' [illegible] were the only sounds [illegible] obscurity now—these, and a few far shots sent after scattering Federal vedettes of the Twelfth Illinois cavalry, riding [illegible] to warn their Capt. Logan that two thousand Rebel horsemen were across the Potomac, and hell was breaking loose along the Mercersburg road.

On the down stream edge of the ford the second section of young Pelham's four-gun horse battery plashed across the waters. Here the [illegible] very crooked and [illegible] a deep angle, the [illegible] on a shore of [illegible] river willows.

From the apex of this angle Yellow Bob spurred his lank hunter [illegible] to the stream leading Lady Margrave and Skylark.

Close at heel through watery obscurity rode "Lucille," hard put to manage Gailliard's horse, which was part thoroughbred. The poor beast and its rider half blinded by driving spray and the [illegible] of plunging horses reared and [illegible] endangering Yellow Bob and the led horses and causing confusion among the mounted runners.

[illegible] Major Pelham sat his horse, bringing order out of confusion. "Oh, Bob," he called out pleasantly, "take the downstream edge with the general's horses and follow the North Virginians on the other side."

"Yaas, suh, major!" bawled Yellow Bob, enchanted at being personally addressed by the most popular man in the army; and he spurred out through shoaling water, Lady Margrave and Skylark galloping [illegible] at lead and little Lucille, still fighting Gailliard's horse, plunging along beside him and up the bank to the Yankee shore.

Operator 13 has crossed the river into Union territory, but she is still in the midst of the Confederate army. Every man of the thousands about her is an enemy. Her life is at the mercy of chance. Unless circumstance favors her, she must surely be discovered and die. To ride with this army is deadly peril. To try to ride away from it would mean instant disaster. Read tomorrow how she strove to free herself.

"Operator 13" is the type of story that appears regularly in the Cosmopolitan Magazine

Los Angeles, Aug. 29—The forty-six weeks' run given "Success Story" in a New York theater is a record we cannot very well ignore. Still, a New York hit does not always do a repeat on the screen. Merian Cooper, however, is completely sold on "Success Story" for a talkie. He is bringing on John Howard Lawton, from Washington to write the adaptation of his own story.

The plot briefly is that of a poor young man who becomes extremely successful in the advertising business but whose weakness is women. Wynne Gibson plays one of these weaknesses and Ona Munson draws the part of the advertising genius.

Stage for Laughton

I have heard everything. Charles Laughton is leaving a four figure a week movie career to appear in Shakespearean plays for the non-pretentious sum of $100 a week. No amount of arguing can talk Charles out of the idea. He will play Shakespearean repertoire, changing the play every three weeks and, of course, he will appear in England. Laughton has a most interesting story, for he was was 26 years old he was a hotel clerk. His first stage play brought him success but he feels that he needs more of a stage background and that's his excuse for passing up the big movie salary which Paramount is willing to pay him. He returns to Hollywood in April to renew his motion picture obligations. He is now only 25.

John Ford is directing "Patrol" and the company moves to Yuma immediately.

Downeys Are Coming, Hooray! Ma 'n' Pa 'n' Little Mort, Too

By BARNEY McDEVITT

Harleigh Schultz, this paper's dramatic and screen editor, has given me the privilege of writing something about Morton Downey, the Irish voice that came out of Connecticut, not the Connecticut Yankee, however. I might mention that I work for Morton Downey, so now readers, this is where a press agent turns ghost writer for himself.

* * *

I should be writing in all probability about Mr. Downey, who comes to headline the RKO Greater Show Season vaudeville bill at the Boston, Friday. Instead, I propose to write—not brilliantly, perhaps, but sincerely—about Morton Downey, the man.

Being Mr. Downey's press agent, I don't intend to mention the fact that he was once a news-butcher on trains that passed right through his home town, Wallingford, Conn., with Mort shouting "cigars, cigarettes, chocolates, chewing gum, popcorn Boston Americans, and all the latest magazines," right by the pink, shell-like ears of sleeping infants, causing them to wake and bawl lustily.

Nor do you may not know about Morton Downey, is that he knows the tunes and lyrics to over 300 songs. That he is barely 31, and is recognized as one of the shrewdest business men among the professionals. He strikes a hard bargain.

In the first place, my boss is the rarest of all phenomenons—a public performer who doesn't like to talk about himself. But just you dare bring up his wife, Barbara Bennett's name or Morton Junior, and he'll go on (and on) for hours about Barbara and Junior, who also are coming to Boston.

My boss will drive here Thursday to see the Boston Braves battle the Giants, attend a press party, and broadcast from WNAC at seven bells.

I've said that Downey won't talk about himself. That isn't strictly true. He'll tell jokes on himself—about his first stage appearance a dozen or so years ago, on which occasion he wore a cowboy outfit, sang "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," in a Jewish neighborhood house and he wasn't asked to repeat. He'll tell you too, that the minute that a public entertainer ceases to advance, he begins losing ground, and that this public favorite of today may be the forgotten talent of tomorrow.

What he won't tell you, but what I'm about to, is this—can you imagine a young man with sleek brown hair, blue eyes and attractive grin, and an elegant voice, declining to play a star part in a forthcoming musical film? This is just what Morton Downey did yesterday at the Paramount studios in Long Island, N. Y.

He told the writer so over the telephone (since I'm his press agent he can't keep the news from me) that he will never again play romantic parts in talkies. Downey having been starred in three films some four years back. He told the producers they ought to have a younger fellow, you know, one of those handsome hero types.

And, as a matter of fact, Downey isn't sure radio names should aspire to screen fame, except a natural actor and comedian like his buddy, Bing Crosby.

So I think, Mr. Harleigh Schultz and dear reading public, in discoursing to you upon the subject of my boss, Morton Downey, that I have done my job.

Exeter Theater

Hollywood hails Jetta Goudal as a Lady of Mystery. Not often is the glamorous star of the old silent drama seen at parties; and when the news photographer glimpsed her among those having fun at a recent Beverly Hills social function, his heart leaped with glee. For here was a gem of a picture subject. Miss Goudal and friends happened to be watching an impromptu feature on the dance floor; the camera shows her at the left. With her are Bruce Cabot, movie he-man, Linda Marsh, and Adrienne Ames, who is Mr. Cabot's sweetheart, according to report. (International News Photo.)

Excellent Bill at Scollay

By LEIGH HARBRIDGE

The Scollay stages a splendid vaude bill this week. For headliner, our old favorite, Sammy White, comic who attained Ziegfeld stardom, puts across a stellar turn. It is titled "Vaudeville a la Carte" and it has the comedian at his funniest. With the aid of a clever lass, Miss Diane Dennis, he has the house all his own, and Amongst the special business to be mentioned are the Sinclair Sisters, Moon Dobson and Herman King. It is a swell act.

Knockout comedy of the merry style is the offering of Fall, Lee and Fall, comics which control the real cornerstones but which give the cue to the style of entertainment the comedians offer. The girl in the trio is just as clever as the males. Gilbert Brothers are excellent acrobats; and among the remainder acts, that of Rosemary and Sudworth Frazer is outstanding for song.

Boston Gets World Premiere of Jeritza in Comic Opera; Cook to Start Parade

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Through the years the lesson is driven home of the importance of watching for the pre-season appearances of the heads of the House of Shubert, J. J. and Lee. There is now a third, up and coming—young John. But more of him, and a mighty good story it is, later along. These veteran producers are always loaded with news if you can but get them to talk. Problem is, finding them off the job. Casually we drop into a seat at the Shubert Theater, beside J. J., who is watching the Joe Cook show in rehearsal. By dint of catching the big boss' ear at intervals, we are enabled to present some of the exclusive news all important to show business, and playgoers, too.

* * *

J. J. has a pet ambition—

"Hold Your Horses" fits into the scheme of things that will work out that ambition.

"This is our most lavish show in a long time," he says.

"There is a reason."

Now the orchestra is striking up a catchy tune—girls in gorgeous costumes float from the wings—the show is on. I am willing to believe that this Joe Cook opus has everything—in rehearsal it looks grand.

"How is?" queries J. J.

"Swell," I reply.

* * *

"As I was saying, I have wanted to reopen the Wintergarden theater to the same high-class extravaganza it was in its glorious era before Jolson, in the first talkie, began his career as a picture house. This is the extravaganza that you are seeing now.

"I want to bring back to that fine old house its old-time public after a lapse of six years. So we've put our money and our hearts into this show.

"Boston sees it first (A. J. is still speaking) and then comes Manhattan."

Plenty of Gadgets

I praise the music at this point.

* * *

I praise the costumes.

"Russell Patterson furnished them, made everything," says J. J. "And he is the best."

I call J. J.'s attention to the Russells connected with the show. He laughs.

"Odd enough," he comments. And Russel Crouse, the humorist, had a hand in the book."

Before changing the topic, let me add that tomorrow night's show should be a humdinger—there were seven cars of props alone! Just think of the variety of Joe Cook gadgets in that enormous pile!

J. J. beams as I mention Jeritza.

* * *

"She is now in Europe," he explains. "Next month she comes to begin rehearsals. We're going to star her in a comic opera."

Sigmund Romberg is writing the music.

"It's title"

He laughs again.

"We're calling it 'Jerry.' Our joke. Nickname for Jeritza. But of course we're going to get a better title.

"Boston will get the premiere. It will be the world premiere. I should say it will be ready by the first or second week in November."

The New Follies

How many musicals on the Shubert program for this season?

"Six or eight," answers J. J. Now the new Follies"

"It is going to be a big show," J. J. declares. "It will not be our production, wholly, however. Billy Burke (Ziegfeld's widow) is in charge, picking the girls, looking after things in general; we are lending our aid and names.

"Billie Burke best can carry on the Ziegfeld tradition, and Lee and I want to help her to our utmost."

* * *

Straight drama?

J. J. lists a number, but for the present—because we want to tell the story of young John—we shall confine ourselves to mention of "A Trip to Pressburg," which will star Pola Negri, and "The Man of Wax," to star Lenore Ulric. To the details we may return another day.

Son Opposes Dad

Young John Shubert is working as hard as his Daddy, whipping 'Hold Your Horses" into final shape. I ask Dad Shubert how the youngster is doing.

"Great," says he proudly. Then Father Shubert laughs.

Lady Ability

"Too fine for his own good."

How so?

"We put him in charge of the rehearsals over in New York (says J. J.) and the kid has succeeded so well that now he wants to stick to show business. I am against it. He is against quitting. So there we are."

I push the question home—why?

"I want him to finish his education," says Dad. "He has but one more year at Harvard. Let him finish, and then, if he be of the same mind, he can return to the show business."

"Perhaps you can help change his mind."

An Apologia for Mrs. Moody and Her Sacra-Iliac ↑ ↓ Going Back to The Definition Of Amateurism

By AUSTEN LAKE

It was wondrously sweet of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody to stomp out on the gallery at Forest Hills right in the middle of her tennis final with Helen Jacobs, and leave the thousands of paying guests in an emotional froth. Because this is the time when the sporting season starts between hay and grass and the writers are gnawing the corners of their press benches in a fever lest they find nothing to feed the linotype machines. And here, in the midst of a news famine, Mrs. Wills provides the boys with enough copy to keep them in a blister until football practice starts and, possibly until the World Series.

For next to a free banquet, your sports commentator delights in nothing so much as an excuse to snipe some national sporting figure, man, woman or child. Some fun we had with Rogers Hornsby, Jack Sharkey, Gene Tunney, Suzanne Lenglen and Paavo Nurmi, eh? Not only did Mrs. Moody traipse out under the bare faces of the U. S. L. T. A. and their paying guests, but Quel Horror! did not she forget the shake of the hand for her opponent, n'est-ce pas? Oui, du nom, du nom, du nom!

Well, it may be my old fashioned simplicity, but I have never been cured of the elementary idea that amateur sport is, basically a diversion played for the purpose of giving pleasure to the contestant. And recently I was sitting with the father of Barry Wood, Harvard's former all round athletic star, who was taking a quarter final flogging in the Longwood Bowl singles, when his dad said, "Barry is having a lot of fun," which was a unique idea considering that Barry was then being shagged hither and thither on the turf and fairly popping his joints.

The word amateur comes from the Latin Amater, meaning lover, and Noah Webster defines it as "one who cultivates an art for amusement, as opposed to professional pursuit." So that I contend that Mrs. Moody, reaching a point where she ceased to be amused, was her own judge and court of final appeal in deciding whether she was physically fit to continue her match. For whatever sportsmanship is involved comes in accepting the lady's word concerning the state of her being, though I notice in the news photos of the incident that the U. S. L. T. A. officials who huddled about the turf, were massaging their chops in a swelter of anguish and wore probably muttering "Dear, dear, this is a grave blow to tennis

U. S. L. T. A. Responsible for Mrs. Moody's Default

And I cite you the example of Ellsworth Vines who collapsed in a sprawl of unconsciousness during the Davis Cup matches in Paris when he was playing Austin Perry, the Englishman, and was hauled off by his shanks somewhat as the Spanish tow away the carcass of a defunct bull after being spitted by a toreador. And as he was being trundled past the clubhouse, a French sportsman bawled "Deflate," which was a subtle quip against President Roosevelt's deflated money program. I wonder whether Mrs. Moody should have risked collapse and waited, like Vines, to be carted off by her heels instead of following the dictates of common sense and walking off under her own power. It is such a delicate problem.

There was the case, last fall, in one of the nearby New England college football games when a player hailed an official and claimed sudden illness. "I want a substitute," he groaned. And the opposing coach yelped across the field for a five yard penalty, because at the moment the legal number of times-out had been used up. "That's only a dodge to get a rest," he bellowed from the bench. Yet shortly afterward an ambulance was summoned and bore the player off for an emergency operation for a ruptured appendix and his life was saved with some difficulty. (Names and dates on application.)

Ann there was the more notorious case of Ernie Schaaf and Primo Carnera last winter when Carnera sighted between Ernie's ears as he bent down and sledged him on the base o fhis brain after which a fury of animal noises and cries of "fake" went up from the arena as Schaaf was carried out to die. And even the morning paper experts filed profound yarns from ringside on the barefaced robbery that had been committed

Well, there has been plenty of subterfuge and larceneous incidents in sport, both amateur and professional, and the games have too often been exploited by promoters as a duck blind from which to pot the unsuspecting public. And I suppose that the condition of chronic mistrust that prevails among sport followers is the natural fruit of past skullduggeries and chiseling by athletes and promoters.

The U. S. L. T. A. for example is unquestionably responsible for Mrs. Moody's default, because she demurred at entering the Forest Hills tournament in the first place, pleading physical incompetency and the warning of her physicians. But the tennis body tore out its whiskers, moaned and quoted the scriptures so fervently that finally Mrs. Moody yielded.

"My child, this is for God, for country and for tennis," assured the tennis lords, forgetting to add, "also for the U. S. L. T. A. tennis fund." For the committee was pretty mad last year when Mrs. Moody tarried too long in Paris where Patou was giving her fittings for an expensive wardrobe, and paid her off by leaving her name out of the national ranking.

Football Approaches the Annual Pre-season Clinic

In professional sports, like six-day bicycle racing, boxing, wrestling, football, and basketball, I am heartily in favor of patching 'em up and sending 'em back for more, because pro athletes sign away their rights as humans when they hire out their bodies at a price And I recall the squat little promoter of the Boston six-day races last winter at the moment when Reggie McNamara was being carried, slack as a hammock, off the track with a huge flap of fresh torn from his stomach by a track splinter. And the squat little man, goggling through thick lenses, had said, pridefully, 'Oh, we will sew him up and put him back. You have no idea how these riders can take punishment."

In a short while in New York the collegefootball moguls will be sitting down for their annual conference on injury prevention and some one will get up and say, as has been said every year before, "After all, football is only a game and the safety of the boys is our first responsibility." And later some hoary, knob knuckled relic of prehistoric football will get up and tell lies on how the earlier generations would nail their splintered bones together and henstitch their wounds between the halves and then go out for another dose. For I have never met a veteran of the old college wars who did not think his own case had cornered all the fortitude and pain bearing stoicism since the first kickoff, so that he will roll up his pant leg and on any street corner to show you his scars and give you a clinical dissertation on the same.

So I commend Mrs. Moody for her resolution in leaving heroics to the other sex. And I for one wish that, years ago, I had walked off the football field just before I got that smash on the breezer that flattened what was, even before then, no ornament to my facial scenery. For Mrs. Moody has the satisfaction of taking her sacra-iliac intact to California instead of scattering parts of her spine on the Forest Hills sward for the greater glory o the U. S. L. T. A. After all, whose sacra-iliac is this anyway?

BRAVES, GIANTS MUST WATCH WEST

Braves Still Hanging On in Second Place

Master Statistician knows what he is going to do when the baseball season is over. He's going to draw up the schedules for next season and see that every pennant contender plays every day and only once daily.

Look at the fine fix he found himself in today. The league leading Giants were carded for a doubleheader with the Cardinals, tied for fourth. The second-place Braves prepared for a little exhibitioning at Springfield, or some such place. The third place Cubs were off to wallop the lowly Dodgers twice The Pirates, sharing fourth, had the Phillies as opponents in a single tilt.

That one, played on your harmonica, would sound something like this

If the Giants lost two, the Cubs win two and the Pirates win, the standing will read

	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.
Giants	71	48	.597	—
Braves	68	55	.553	5
Cubs	69	56	.552	5
Cards	68	57	.544	6
Pirates	66	58	.541	6½

Should the Giants win two, the Cubs lose two and the Pirates lose,

	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.

HOT WELCOME FOR WALLY

WALLY BERGER

LOSSES NOW INVITE REAL TROUBLE ON ROAD

By JOE CASHMAN

Will somebody kindly tell the Braves and Giants whether they should pat themselves on the back or kick themselves in the pants today?

This corner can't. And both clubs are most anxious to know.

The Braves must remain idle this afternoon — a schedule command — and give the Giants a [illegible] either way by taking a doubleheader from the Cardinals.

The Giants must play twice against a rival they have failed to beat in three starts and may drop a full game to the rolling Warriors.

On the past record than the future, manager Terry, the chief cause of the aforementioned indecision on the part of these National League pennant contenders.

The Braves don't know whether to [illegible] because they gained a [illegible] on the Giants while losing four out of three to the lowly Reds or to cry because they let the last place Phillies [illegible] them of a chance to pull within four games of the [illegible]

The Giants [illegible] undecided whether to cheer because they have lost a little ground during their stump [illegible] or because they passed up a great opportunity to clinch the [illegible] Pirates.

INVITING TROUBLE

As your correspondent looks at it, both Braves and Giants have invited plenty of trouble by their recent failures each of which followed an eight-game win streak.

The Cubs, Cardinals and Pirates are now very much back in the running in the flag hunt and all these Western entries are returning home in a few days to spend the remainder of the season

And both Braves and Giants face a [illegible] Western road trip which will keep [illegible] without harming their pennant prospects just as long as the club succeeds in [illegible] loses too.

The Braves on the other hand, face the problem of gaining those six games and each defeat they suffer greatly reduces their chances of turning the trick, no matter what the Terrymen do.

The Tribal defeat in the second Sunday game wasn't so bad. The natives had it coming. The Monday setback was very hard to take, especially since it was a discouraging twilight contest.

The Warriors should and in all probability, will swing back into their winning stride before long, but if the comeback is to do them any good it would appear that it must be started tomorrow.

It's imperative that our heroes take the fourth and final game from the Redlegs and thus split an even split in the series. For only by so doing can they gain the necessary confidence and be sure of being near enough to the top to go places and do things in the stretch drive engendered with the Giants, starting, Thursday.

REDS TELL STORY

For the Reds are putting on one point, to-wit and namely: That he will be knocking the ears off hostile pitchers for many seasons to come, even if he has to be it reported to the plate in a wheel chair.

Hornsby planned to send Sad Sam'l Gray and Ed (Satchelfeet) Wells to the front today, and Manager Manus was to rely on (1) the right arm of Johnny Welch, and (2) the left arm of Bob Weiland

The Red Sox shake the dust of the West off their heels immediately after the game. They will arrive in New York tomorrow evening and start a series with the dispirited Yankees, who are simply going through the motions of playing out a most disappointing season.

Roger Hornsby, who recently succeeded Bill Killefer as manager of the local club promises to whip the Peasants up into a lather come next spring

Say what you want about Hornsby, and think what you will about him, but the horse-faced Hornsby will have no keep walkers on any club with which he is connected

"I'm completely satisfied with my job here," he said last night, "for the first time in my career as manager of a ball club, Phil Ball, the owner, has given me complete control of the team. There is no second-guessing, and I think that by the end of 1934, when my contract runs out, I'll have a fighting, hustling club."

Hornsby himself intends to play third base next year. He says Schaefer and Sloan as third basemen, but they are leather-clusters as bats. The Rajah, who still [illegible] an innocent baseball public, believes that he is fast enough to play the hot corner whether a gink either steps in the ball or waves at it.

HORNSBL SLUGGER YET

Speed helps there, of course, but it is not nearly so essential as at second, which Hornsby played in his younger days, and wise old hands like Marty McManus and Joe Judge think that the Rajah will succeed at third next year.

Braves' Spirit Winning, Says Judge Fuchs

Much Depends on Rabbit

Gyselman has been in professional baseball only two seasons, but he started to come so fast that we hope and predict that he will continue to fit in with the present make-up of the club.

In speaking of Manager McKechnie, it is my hope, not only because of the close personal friendship, but because his devotion to the game is such that he has, with me, acquired love for the city and the people of Boston, that he will stay with me throughout the many years I hope to continue my association with the Braves.

A great deal depends on the physical continuation of the "fountain of youth," Rabbit Maranville, who, according to McKechnie, has played the best game of his life this season.

It was a pleasure for me to have Manager McKechnie tell me that although he has had great outfielders under him in the past, including Cuyler, he believes that Outfielder Lee is the best left-fielder he has ever had under him.

Summing up the situation, I must, of course, attribute the standing of the Braves to the improvement that four years of purchases and experiments have brought about, but we must remind that, I attribute the standing to the fighting spirit and determination of the boys of the club that they are ordained to "go places," and outside of my great personal interest, I wish them God Speed!

Let me say in conclusion that the spirit has reached the hearts of New England because New England claims the Braves as their own, and from their interest and patronage they are entitled to that claim.

It is my hope to have the Braves a Boston-owned club. Not one share of stock has been allowed to go outside of New England. The confidence of public men like Mayor Curley, ex-Governor Allen, District-Attorney Foley, Senator Ward, Councilman Green, and others, all of whom are stockholders, have helped us, along with business men of Boston, such as Wm J. Fallon, Sidney Rabinovitz, Oscar Horton, Richard Hallowell 3rd, J. H. Drake, Bill Hogan, Joseph Maney, John and William Coleman, Joseph Tomasello, Jacob Wirth and others.

Bring Back Old Songs

Governor Ely, James Roosevelt and Senator Walsh are with us, and I was pleased to have Mr. James Roosevelt say to me the other day—"I hope we win the pennant so that if Washington wins, my father will be on one side and I shall be rooting for Boston on the other side.' What a wonderful picture that would make! I can only say that if this is so, the old song, "When Dreams Come True" will be the theme song along with the old war song of "Tenda."

We also have the deep interest of the church. Father Gallagher, president of Boston College; Father Burke of South Boston, Rabbi Harry Levi of Brookline, Rev. Dr. Maddaus of Somerville, are all giving us inspiration.

So, whatever happens, we shall be there trying to bring back to Boston the classic of American sports. If we fail we shall go down fighting—if we succeed you will find us with becoming humility and thanks.

B. U. GETS LATE GRID START

Dr John Harmon, Boston University's new grid mentor, announced today that his Terriers would report for their initial workout on September 11.

This is a week later than the usual Boston University opening. Dr Harmon, however, feels that three weeks is all that is necessary to whip his charges into shape for the Middlebury game September 20

For the first ten days of practice the squad will be sent through two sessions a day and then sent to one a day when school begins September 22.

The coach will have plenty of work cut out for him, for respite his large group of veterans returning he has lost six veterans Dave Mizel, backfield coach, will have to fill three gaps among the ball toters.

Brouillard Spurns $5000 Offer

Worcester, Mass., Aug 29 (INS)—Five thousand dollars for the middleweight championship is far too little, Maurice Lemoine, manager of Leo Brouillard, titleholder, declared today.

Lemoine said he received an offer from Homer C. Rainault, Springfield and Holyoke boxing promoter, offering Brouillard $5000 or 40 per cent of the gate for a fight with Joe Kaminski, of New York, late in September. However, Lemoine said he would decline the offer.

He revealed that negotiations were virtually completed for a 10-round non-title affair at the Boston Garden on Sept. 22 when Brouillard will meet Adolf Heuser, 170, of Germany.

St. Louis Park Is Fine Place to Hide—Egan

By DAVID F. EGAN

St. Louis, Aug. 29—It spluttered a little rain in the early hours of the morning, when decent persons were in their beds; the Monday game was postponed; and so the Red Sox were to play a doubleheader with the Browns at Sportsman's Park this afternoon.

Your correspondent once a trusting young man but now a meanfaced, suspicious old codger, suspects that the game was called off in the hope that a doubleheader would lure the events through the turnstiles in greater numbers

At an early hour this morning, the club officials predicted that with fair weather and a favoring wind, a crowd of between four hundred and five hundred would storm the portals of the park. And that, my compatriots is considered an enormous weekday attendance in this here sow villiage.

FANS MISSING

The Sunday doubleheader drew a crowd of 1300 customers. Last Saturday, for a single game with the Red Sox not more than 800 moths were released from captivity, for not more than 800 souls 'Ed note Heeah' were in attendance, and I am to'd on what is always described as impeceable authority that the paid attendance has been as small as 57 on certain weekdays.

"Where do these St. Louis fans go?" moaned Phillup Troy, the travelling secretary, last Sunday.

"This," said the comical Col Egan, gazing around the deserted park, "would be an ideal spot for a criminal to hide out. Now if 'Machine Gun' Jack McGurn had come here instead of playing in the Western open in Chicago, I am sure that he would not now be in the clutches of Mr. John Law for Mr. Law would never think of seeking anybody in such a secluded spot."

"Jeepers," said Mr. Troy, who resorts to such vulgar terms when under a great emotional strain, "do you suppose that the cold smile of sleeping sickness stared there? Kermel, it looks to me as if we are in the very midst of the epidemic. Let us go to some noisy place, like the library, and see if they will issue a library card to us. I want noise and excitement."

RAJAH SATISFIED

That has been the somnolent state of affairs in American League circles here for some years, but [illegible] Roger Hornsby, who recently succeeded Bill Killefer as manager of the local club promises to whip the Peasants up into a lather come next spring

JEAN SCRIBNER IS RUNNER-UP AT WOODLAND

By BILL GRIMES

As befitting a defending champion Virginia Bascom of Worcester, was the medalist with a 91 in the qualifying round of the State girls' junior championship today at Woodland Golf Club. Little Miss Bascom went to the turn in 45 and came back in 46, which gave her a two-stroke lead over Jean Scribner of Woodland, co-holder of the club par mixed foursome championship with Jesse P. Guilford.

Miss Scribner struggled to the turn in 45 but managed to get back in 48 for 93.

COSTLY INWARD DRIVE

Virginia Bascom started off by pulling her drive into the bushes, but wound up with a five on the opening hole. She was home nicely in two and on the second hole she got her four.

But after two niceshots going down the third fairway she made a weak approach and wound up with a six.

At the fourth hole Miss Bascom's drive was up against a tree, forcing her to play a safety shot back into the fairway from where she go home and down in two putts for a five.

She got her par three from the front edge of the fifth green and a nice five going up the difficult sixth hole where she was just short of the green in two.

Her putter went out of control on the seventh green. She wound up with a six and three putts at the eighth after being trapped on her second cost Miss Bascom another six.

MISSES SHORT PUTT

She came right back and got her five at the tough ninth which should have been a four as she missed a very short putt.

At the tenth hole, Miss Bascom connected with a fine drive but her ball was in a hole and she was obliged to play an iron shot for her second. She used up three more shots before getting home.

This cost her a seven. Although she played two weak shots at the short 11th, her first being short of the trap and her second short of the green, she got down in one putt for a four.

After a beautiful drive at the 12th, Miss Bascom messed up a couple of shots and finished the hole with three putts for a seven.

She was just short of the 12th green from the tee but her chip was strong running 20 feet beyond the cup and naturally she missed her three taking a four.

She took another five at the 16th where she missed another holeable putt. She was down after dropping a six foot putt at the 17th and then took three to get from the apron of the home green for another five to be back in 46 for a 91.

STRING OF SIXES

Jean Scribner ran into five sixes during the first nine holes which mounted her score to a 48. To further complicate matters she started home with an eight on the first hole.

After getting down with one out for a three at the 11th, and taking a good six following a missed drive which was trapped at the 12th, Miss Scribner ran in a 15 foot putt for a duce at the 13th.

She went all to pieces at the 14th taking six to get on but luckily got down a ten footer for a seven.

Following a four at the short 15th, Miss Scribner topped a spoon shot at the 16th. Her third was on the side of the hill from where she pitched on, and took two putts.

She took three to get down from between the trap and the green on the 17th for a five but came up with a nice four at the home hole for her 93.

Jeanette Smith opened up with a six when she pulled her second shot so badly that it went down in front of the second tee. She got a five at the second despite a trapped tee shot and followed th with a par at the third and went playing steady golf until she hit the eighth.

BAD NINTH

The long ninth, a difficult hole cost Miss Smith an eight. She was out in 49.

She had trouble at the long 10th and 12th holes coming in, taking seven on each but played the last six holes in three under fives to be back in 45 for a 94.

Cynthia Richardson, one of the youngest girls in the field, raced to the turn in 45 which included a birdie at the fourth hole where she dropped a six-footer for a three.

After starting home well, Miss Richardson bumped into a couple of eights the first at the 2th and the second at the 14th. The little Highland lass was noticeably upset by her failure to play better at these holes for she three putted the next three greens and did not recover until the home hole. Here she ran in a 10-footer for a four.

Miss Joan Palfry and Miss Barbara Clark both of the Country Club, were tied for eighth place in the championship flight with 103. Miss Palfry won the playoff at the third extra hole, to enter the championship flight.

JOHNNY INDRISANO FRANCIS ROWBOTHAM

MAYOR JAMES M. CURLEY MRS. PEARL EDWARDS EMMA LEAF

His Honor, above, presents the ladies' first prize to Mrs. Edwards. Rowbotham, 1933 tourney victor, is the sole acer in the two years the classic has been conducted. HELEN JONES IN PRODIGY'S PATH

Haverford, Pa., Aug 29 (AP)—A 14-year-old Florida girl, who says she can beat the two other feminine junior tennis players in her home town, opened her bid for net honors impressively.

Patty Kilmartin, who hails from Miami Beach, playing in her first tournament in this vicinity in the Merion Cricket Club girls' event, overwhelmed Elsabeth Pearson, of Philadelphia, in the first round to win at love.

In her tourney path, however, are at least two of the country's star girl players. Helen Grawn, of Detroit, national indoor girls' titlist and ranking player in the tourney, and third-seeded Helen Jones, of Swampscott, Mass., champion in her home state each advanced without much difficulty.

LOWELL VISITS MALDEN NINE

Malden's strong nine this evening plays host to the C. M. A. C. team of Lowell in a Boston Twilight League playoff game. Rained out last evening, Malden will have its chance this p. m.

Each team holds one victory in the series. Malden won the opener 4 to 3 and Lowell took the second 9 to 8.

Rea and Lord of the C. M. A. C. team and Solly Thurston and Bill Hunnefield of Malden are leading sluggers of the series.

The James E. Hagan Club of Somerville and the Waltham Town Team go into the fifth game of their runnerup series at the Waltham Bike Park tomorrow evening. Each team now holds two victories. They split a double-header Sunday after losing a game apiece on their home parks.

New York, Aug 29 (INS)—Bill Shores, pitcher recalled from the Kansas City club of the American Association, will report to the New York Giants on Sept. 1 at Boston.

Willie Turnesa Future U. S. Golf Champion

By BILL GRIMES

Rotund Tommy McNamara, a product of the Settlement in Brookline, who is the representative of the promotional department of the Western Sporting Goods, Co., is back in Boston, after a tour of the Middle West during which he took in the National Open, the P. G. A. and the Metropolitan golf championships.

On his last visit home, Tommy "Mac" was a member of the Sarazen caravan. He is now doing missionary work for the new Hol-Hi Thin Covered ball, which has met with such favor among the professionals and amateurs.

Tommy Mac is in such close touch with golf in all parts of the country that he is a virtual fountain of news. Whenever Tommy gets off his pet subject, the Thin Covered Hol-Hi ball, he invariably turns to Willie Turnesa, who, in his opinion is the most promising golfer in the East.

WILLIE YOUNGEST TURNESA

Willie Turnesa is the youngest member of the famous golfing family. There are six professionals in the Turnesa family, of which Joe and Mike are the most famous. Phil and Jim are at Elmsford C. C., in their home town. Frank and Doug are at Briar Hills, Joe is at Belleclair and Mike is assistant to John Ingles at Fairview.

According to McNamara, Willie Turnesa will remain in the amateur ranks. And Tommy's information is based on the word of six Turnesa professionals. Willie will enter law school in New York next month to ready himself for a business career. He is only 18 years old stands about five feet six inches and weighs 125 pounds.

During the amateur vs. professional fourball matches before the Ryder Cup team sailed for abroad, Willie Turnesa teamed with Al Reinach against Horton Smith and big Ed Dudley at the Metropolis C. C. at White Plains, N. Y. Not only did he and his partner beat Smith and Dudley but Willie carded the best round of the entire field, which included all of the United States Ryder Cup team players, a 71.

NEW GOLF BALL PERFECTED

McNamara has the highest praise for the youngest member of the Turnesa family. Willie is very long off the tees and through the fairgreens, a wonderful iron player and a deadly approacher. Tommy predicts that Willie will be a national amateur and open champion, for he is not only a brilliant shot maker but is further fortified by an even temperament, which will carry him over the rough spots.

After telling of Willie Turnesa, Tommy reverted to his pet subject, Thin Covered Ho-Hie golf balls. The cover and center of this ball each is about 50 per cent thinner than on the regular high-priced agates and the difference is offset by more elastic winding which, by actual test, gives the ball 10 to 12 yards more carry, and a most distinctive click which is always sweet music to the golfers.

Before this ball was marketed McNamara put it through a thorough and most varied test. He had the leading professionals, Johnny Farrell, Gene Sarazen, Joe Turnesa, Ed Dudley and Mac Smith try it out. Then he tossed some out to the top notch amateurs, the outstanding women golfers and finally to hackers, sluggers and sweepers. Tommy placed his O. K. on the ball as a perfect product and it was put on the market just prior to the P. G. A. championship, which was won by Sarazen.

McNamara is visiting his mother in Brookline and will be in and around town for another week before he starts for the national amateur championship in Cincinnati, after which he will go to the Coast and then head back through Texas and down to Florida for most of the winter.

MISS VAN WIE, ENID WILSON WIN EASILY

Exmoor Country Club, Highland Park, Ill., Aug. 29 (AP)—Miss Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, defending champion and Miss Enid Wilson, English titleholder, swept through the first round of the women's national golf championship today with easy victories.

The English champion making her third try for the American title played a safe game today in contrast to her 78 in the qualifying round yesterday that shattered the championship record by one shot. She lost two holes, one to par and another to a birdie, and was two over par for the distance.

Miss Van Wie defeated Elizabeth Dunn of Indianapolis by the one sided margin of 7 and 6 losing only one hole, while Miss Wilson, making her third try for the title submerged Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake of New York, 3 and 2.

After halving the 14th in par to go dormie 4, the English champion played short all the way on the next hole, took a 6 and was dormie 3.

Today three more Braves rooters are honored with the ceremonial headpieces. If that's you with the headdress surmounted, you win the sawbuck today. If you've got two feathers over your circled head, five bucks go to you with our compliments. A single feather wins you two tickets to a Braves game.

Be sure and get a feather at any one of the main gates when you go to Braves Field next time. Wear your feather, and watch the Boston Evening American to see if you win.

With Olive Hasenfus of the B. S. A. and Louise Stokes of the Onteora Club already entered, the New England A. A. A. U. 100 metres senior championship promises to be the feature of the 44th annual games of the Associated Clans, O. S. C., to be staged Labor Day at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury.

The B. S. A. flyer is the present National A. A. U. 200 metres title holder as well as the New England champion at the same distance. Miss Stokes, a member of the 1932 American Olympic team, holds every New England sprint mark and title up to 200 metres, and in addition she is the National A. A. U. 50-metres queen.

The best women athletes in New England are entered in the Scotch games. There is another title event on the program, the New England A. A. A. U. junior 200 metres, and also 440 yards relay, 50-yard dash, broad jump and high jump. Roberta Winton, Marjorie Welch, Miriam Nelson and Marjie McGlone are all entered in the 50, while Mary Anderson and Barbara Howe will be starters in the furlong. Natalie Welch is in the broad jump. Olive Hasenfus will vie in the high jump, an event in which she has developed rapidly of late.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Col. Dave Egan,
St. Louis, Mo.
Dear Dave:

You have been writing so many letters of late that I thought I'd drop you a few lines to ask you to tell my creditors to go ... Maybe it is the NRA but now I have two creditors where I only had one.

I have never needed the assistance of a cole to increase the number of my creditors. Or the members of my family either.

Mr Boston

You have been so busy sending back stories about Red Sox injured lists that I was beginning to believe I was reading police bulletins. ... The only difference between a baseball and a police reporter under such conditions is that the baseball expert usually grieves deeply when a star is put out of the game, while the more injured the greater the joy of the police reporter.

I wasn't surprised to hear that Marty McManus made the White Sox curl up when they started cutting down infielders with their spikes. Why don't you sign McManus to a five-year fight contract, and I'll get Billy Ames to toss him in at the Garden? Marty might inject a little life into the fistic game.

I dropped out to Braves Field, Dave, so that I could give you the lowdown on the 1933 miracle Braves. Here is a ball club that some of the boys didn't figure could finish in eighth place in the Twilight League at the start of the season and now it has the Giants scared stiff. In fact Billy Terry, Giants manager and first baseman is so much on edge as a result of the Tribal surge that he works off his emotions by taking a few friendly pokes at an umpire. I know you will never throw a man down because he lets his fists fly now and then.

Berger Driving Power

If they are still publishing newspapers in St. Louis these hot summer days, you probably know the Braves are in second place and going like hell bent on election and what not after the Giants. During Monday afternoon's game, I tried to discover what had brought about this new condition of affairs.

You must give me credit, Dave, for being an expert on such things. Didn't I tell the gang around Newspaper Row Colonel Egan was going places in this newspaper business at a time when you had not cast aside your Newport manners or Harvard accent? And, Dave, old boy, I do not believe I put it on heavy enough. You have been batting .912 of late when I only had you rated as a .730 sticker.

Anyhow, Dave, I would say offhand and without gazing into a crystal or tossing a magic coin, that Wally Berger furnishes the offensive punch of the Braves. This fellow ... scales off the outfield fence that it looks as if the lumber people will soon find a pickup in their business. Wally socks that hard.

Rabbit Maranville who used to amuse me with his antics at Macon, Ga., in the spring of 1915, the spark of the Braves team. He has the gang on their toes.

Whitney has plugged the gap at third base while Lee and Randy Moore are running wild in the outfield. They are snatching balls off the tops of the fences. Nobody ... as a result of poor fielding.

Star Staff of Pitchers

The real defensive strength of the Braves is in the pitching staff. Ben Cantwell has won so many games that Judge Fuchs has told Eddie Cunningham to get an adding machine to keep count of them. Ed Brandt has also been knocking the opposition silly. He pitched well enough to win the Monday game, but that guy Lucas would just turn in one of those wonder ball games. Frankhouse, Zachary, Betts and Smith have been doing some fine flinging.

"What do you think of the Braves, Sammy?" I asked.

"They have already sold 28 rows of reserved seats for next Sunday's game with the Giants," replied Lewis. "Formerly only 12 rows were reserved, but business is picking up."

"I asked you for your opinion on the Braves," I pressed.

"Haven't I told you," replied Sammy. "They're in the money, and they didn't get that way by losing ball games."

The series with the Giants open on Thursday, and if somebody isn't killed before it is over it will not be the fault of the rival players. They will step into battle with their shooting irons on. It will give the umpires an opportunity to earn their money. Since the Braves have been winning, I have cultivated a dislike for umpires, especially when they render a close decision against the Braves. Maybe I'm getting daffy over baseball like everybody else in town.

Yours for better days
MR. BOSTON

P. S.—Do they still sell good beer in St. Louis? And do the ball players sleep on the fire escapes at night to keep from roasting to death? Austen Lake "scooped" the town again when he flashed a story that Judge Fuchs was going to sign Bill McKechnie for four more years. It was awfully nice of the Cardinals to knock off the Giants by that seven-run rally in the ninth.

MR. BOSTON.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Miss Virginia Van Wie, the women's national titlist, was no more concerned over defending her laurels at Exmoor than Miss Virginia Bascom was over the outsome of the state girls' championship at Woodland, where 20 lasses were battling today through 18 holes for the 16 qualifying places.

Miss Cynthia Richardson, Highland, a 14-year-older, was watched closely today at Woodland. Miss Richardson was 94 for her practise round at the Auburndale course and felt sure she would lower those figures under pressure.

Jack Curley continues to win the big money. One week after picking up $175 by winning the New Hampshire open with a record breaking round of 66, Curley, with Jimmie Fisher, the Bear Hill club champion, as his partner stepped around Wachusett with a couple of 68s to capture the N. E. P. G. O. tournament.

Curley, Fisher Able

By the way, any amateur-pro combination in New England that thinks enough of its ability to wager some real money can arrange a match with Jack Curley and Jimmie Fisher.

TAP'S TIPS

Tommy McNamara, promotion representative of the Western Sporting Goods Co., thinks so well of Jack Curley as a shot maker and a competitor that he has started negotiations to have the Stoney Brae pro selected for the United States Ryder Cup team.

Bill Thurston and Francis "Ancy" Doyle were awarded the second gross prize at Wachusett, while the net awards went to Walter Cosgrove and Charlie Donnelly, and Jimmie Powers and Jimmie Dolan.

Understand that the two players who allegedly doctored their cards at Woodland last week are to be dropped from the club tonight.

Pres. Livesay of the U. S. Left Handed Golfers' Association will compete in the New England southpaw championship at Presidential. Bruce Evans reports that the early entries indicate an unusually large field.

Simi Braio, who rates with the best greenskeepers in the country, has performed a miracle with the Wachusett Country Club. Despite the fact that he has a staff of but three men, Simi has the West Boylston course in championship condition, especially the greens, which are marvelous putting surfaces.

Miss Wilson at Peak

LARKIN SAILS TO VICTORY AT GLOUCESTER

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 29. The Westerly, R. I., junior crew, captained by Dan Larkin, sailed to a first place this morning in the second race of the series for the national junior championships at the Eastern Point Yacht Club, and thereby went into a tie with Frank Jewett's Vineyard Haven crew in the point standing.

Vineyard was second today and won the opening race yesterday. Each has 15½ points, while Dux- [illegible]

After drying sails and overhauling gear tangled in yesterday's [illegible] cut over a short 4½ mile course [illegible]

In order to provide a windward start, the committee boat was stationed at the westward side of the [illegible] before they turned the bell, then against resumed the lead on the run.

Beating for the finish, Westerly worked in under the shore and drew up from third to first place. Vineyard took the same course to earn a second place, while George Poor of Pleon played a middle course and dropped back from second to sixth.

Tonight the Eastern Point Yacht Club is giving a dinner for the two dozen visiting yachtsmen and the officials who are in charge of the races.

BREEZE FLUKEY

Frank B. Jewett, Jr., and his Vineyard Haven crew had the lead after the first race was over, but not even the most enthusiastic of Vineyard rooters claimed that the winner had demonstrated anything more than a nose for wind in that contest. Clearly, with the breeze all over the place, varying from a squall to almost a calm, the abilities of the several crews did not appear.

When the eight Triangle boats were sent away by Harry Walker's committee from a line off the breakwater there was a very light southeast wind blowing. The windward work was to be provided by the second leg of the triangular course. Spinnakers were set at the start, and gradually were carried farther and farther forward as the wind headed.

Then came the squall. It gave ample warning of its arrival, though it came from the sea and not off the land as squalls usually do on the North Shore. There was not a great deal of wind in it but plenty of rain. After the first onset the wind dropped, shifted all round the compass and came west for a while so that the last boats had to beat for the leeward mark. A new southeaster followed the period of doldrums, and reached the leading boats Duxbury and Pleon to give them a big lift before the others.

PLEON IN TROUBLE

Later fortune changed. Pleon and Duxbury stood inshore and ran into soft spots where they bobbed around while Vineyard and Westerly, tacking out to sea, got the full strength of the air. In addition, the wind again hauled into the south, leaving the Massachusetts Bay boats down to leeward while lifting their rivals. Vineyard, Madison Beach and Westerly led around the weather mark, the second two exchanging places on the run home.

Bayshore had an unlucky day. They were well placed to leeward at the start, and then the wind hauled and left them far astern. Their spinnaker jammed aloft and they had a hard time getting it back on deck. Finally at the weather mark they lost a man overboard. They got him back aboard all right, but lost more time thereby.

TYPICAL SQUALL

For students of weather phenomena, and all yachtsmen fit that category more or less, the storm furnished a beautiful example of a "line squall," which is generated when a wave of cold air meets a warm belt. The typical "roll cloud" formation, which is formed by the turbulent air in front of the storm, appeared against the dark rain clouds as perfectly as an illustration for a text book. Even the temporary reversal of the wind's direction behaved quite according to Hoyle.

'Blind Mike' Tries Again to Win Toronto Swim

Toronto, Aug. 29 (AP)—That perennial entrant, "Blind Mike" Hambourg, will be in the field again when the Canadian National Exhibition's 15-mile marathon swim gets under way tomorrow, still hopeful of winning the cash prize that might regain for him his sight.

Year after year he has competed against the world's best in these marathons, plugging slowly along behind a boat from which a bell rings stridently to keep him on the course.

Never has he been able to finish in the money, but generally he has been one of the last to give up, declaring "next year will be my year."

The $5000 first prize would enable him to take a trip to Europe to see a specialist, who, Mike [illegible] may be able to restore his sight.

Winston Whips Galento

Newark, N. J., Aug. 29 (INS)—Unknown Winston, Hartford Ct., negro heavyweight, recorded another of his surprises today. He whipped Tony Galento, New Jersey favorite, in ten fast rounds here last night.

TRIBE, GIANTS FEAR WEST

The stocky right-handed ace of the hostiles, who once was a Tribal infielder, gave only two hits, a double by Berger in the seventh and a single by Maranville in the eighth. It appeared to many that Berger, who was sacrificed to third, scored on Whitney's fly to center, but Umpire Quigley ruled that Hafey's throw had nipped the local slugger. That break was all Lucas needed to complete a fine job of whitewashing.

That Hafey person made two of the six hits allowed by Ed Brandt and scored both enemy tallies. A sacrifice and a single sent him over in the fourth and two bunts and a long fly chased him around in the ninth.

The bespectacled "Chick" was also the fielding hero of the fray. In addition to cutting off Berger at the plate, he doubled up Whitney off second in the fifth and pulled down six sizzling drives.

The Braves go to Springfield for an exhibition game this evening. If there is a Lucas or a Hafey on the nine representing the City of Homes, he would do well to make himself scarce.

Anzac Duo Trailing in Net Semifinal

By JOE MOONEY

On waterlogged and spike-cut courts play in the national doubles and national mixed doubles was to resume at the Longwood Cricket Club today.

The harassed Longwood officials beg you to bear with them until after today's semifinals on the promise that such an important tournament will never be run under such unsatisfactory conditions again.

All tennis today came under the head of unfinished business. The Australian team of Adrian Quist and Don Turnbull were to take up where they were rained out against the Americans George Lott and Lester Stoefen, who were leading 6—4, 1—2.

In the mixed doubles Elizabeth Ryan and Ellsworth Vines were to get on with the business of giving the British pair, Dorothy Round and Fred Perry the office after 11 games had been completed.

FINALS ON TOMORROW

As the result of Monday's cloudburst, finals in both tournaments have been put over until tomorrow, setting an all time record for deferred net coronations.

This is all right with the new dark horse team of Frankie Parker and Frank Shields, who have a full day's rest in which to practice for the finals, and contemplate their sweet victory over the defending titlists, Vines and Gledhill, before the deluge.

The margin of victory for the oddly matched pair over Vines and Gledhill was not much—55 points to 54, 92 errors to 91 for the champions. Vines was a little better than Shields, but Parker was much better than Gledhill, and that told the story.

Peggy Scriven of England, and Jack Crawford, the Australian, were leading 4-3 in the first set over Sarah Palfrey and George Lot before they were washed. This match resumed today.

CONRAD, LIVAN TRY AGAIN

By JACK CONWAY

The Cycle A. C. of Revere will [illegible] stage the 12-round bout between Vittoria Livan and Norman Conrad for the light heavyweight championship of New England. Rain kayoed this attraction last night.

Livan and Conrad were both disappointed when it was necessary to postpone the tussle, but each says he will be at his best when he sweeps into action tonight.

Livan formerly campaigned as a middleweight. He has packed on weight, and is confident he will upset Conrad.

There is considerable interest in the eight-round semifinal which will feature Tom Kirby of Roxbury starting his latest comeback effort, and "Red" Barry of Washington. The Cycle Club had difficulty securing an opponent for the clever Kirby. None of the local ring warriors would accept the task, and it was necessary to secure the services of Barry.

Johnny Dixon of Norwood will toss punches at Eddie Callahan of Nashua, N. H., in a six-rounder. Callahan has one decision to his credit over Dixon, and is anxious to add another victory to his list tonight. There will also be a couple of four rounders.

AMATEURS AID HENIGAN FETE

Leading amateur athletic clubs of New England are giving their full support to the wrestling carnival in aid of Mrs. Jimmy Henigan and her six children, which will be staged at the Arena tomorrow night under the direction of Steve McPherson. It is expected that thousands of followers of [illegible] pure sport will turn out for the monster mat card.

Dan Martin, the outstanding star of the McPherson troupe of [illegible] appears [illegible] action in the main event, best two falls out of three to a finish, against Rebel Bob Russell. The "Bull" has been turning up and tipping over the opposition at various local fairs. Russell is every bit as rough as Martin, and a torrid session is expected.

The other star bout will find Regis Siki in action against Benny Ginsberg. There will also be a long list of preliminary matches.

Proulx in Kayo Win Over Benito

Fan Scouts Boosting Semipros

The fan scouts for Judge Fuchs have only started to comb the semipro and amateur diamonds for that ballplayer who will make a free training trip South with the Braves next spring.

And how they're turning them in!

It's none of the contest editor's headache. The Braves committee consisting of Judge Fuchs, Bill McKechnie, Fred Mitchell and Johnny Evers have the sweet task of picking the winner.

Letters aiming for that free season pass, offered for the best 100 words or less recommending one of a Greater Boston ballplayer [illegible] to pile up [illegible] letter receives the same consideration.

You find the ball player, tell us [illegible] with [illegible] and the [illegible] will do the rest.

Cornell Resumes Dropped Sports

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP)—The Cornell Athletic Association, which withdrew financial support from all sports except football and basketball last winter, again will resume normal activities with the opening of the fall term and full schedules for cross-country and soccer were announced today.

The student themselves conducted the so-called minor sports on an informal basis during the winter and spring, and also carried out competition in baseball, track and rowing.

Harry Kelley in Charge of Fuller's Training

Harry Kelley, one of the best handlers of boxers in the country, is in charge of Sammy Fuller's training for the latter's 10-round bout with Billy Petrolle, Fargo Express, at the Garden on Sept. 8. Kelley has trained Jim Maloney, Jack Sharkey, Honeyboy Finnegan and other prominent boxers, and is certain to have Fuller in fine condition for his meeting with the heavy thumping Petrolle. The latter will arrive in Boston on Friday, and will complete his training at a local gym.

Jack Hurley, Petrolle's manager, will come here with the Fargo Express. Charley Retzlaff will also be in the party.

"What does the 'Blue Eagle' stand for, Dad?

...What do they mean by WE DO OUR PART?"

DAD: I'm glad you asked me that, Son—it's about time we got to that subject, right here at home. The Blue Eagle stands for dozens of things—but what they all come down to is putting millions of people back to work and giving them a living wage.

MOTHER: But Henry, I've been reading about those business "codes"—and so on, until I can't make head or tail of it. How does it affect us—I mean how do we benefit by it, or what should we do about it?

DAD: Well, that's what I'm getting at. You can forget about those codes—they're simply the rules accepted by each business group in following out the President's recovery program. The question is—what about us? It means that work, and hours, and wages are being adjusted so that there will be something for everyone to do—it means that I can hold my job and keep this family going. As to what we should do about it, you, Edith, were helping when you bought Herbert's winter outfit today—ahead of time. Sure, you saved money—but what you did spend went into circulation, and that means that more things will be made and more people will be hired to make them.

SISTER: That's just what Mr. Evans was telling us at the office today—that the whole plan depends on people just like us. He said that if everyone that could afford it would buy what they need now, the whole job would be done overnight.

MOTHER: It's easy enough to say all those things—but I'm the one that has to manage our affairs. Am I supposed to go out and buy everything in sight, no matter what it costs? I think I'm patriotic, but someone has to be practical in this house.

DAD: All right, Edith—go ahead and be practical. But let's be sensible about it—if a business has to cut down its working hours, it must take on more people to turn out the same amount of goods. If it adds that extra expense, it must naturally charge more for its products. Actually, every business code passed by the government insists that prices must be reasonably higher than the costs of making them. It's a principle of live-and-let-live competition—and just as sure as you're alive, we'll have to pay accordingly.

MOTHER: It sounds all right, Henry—but how can we pay those higher prices if you don't make more money? How can our income equal our expenses if prices keep going up?

DAD: That depends on everyone doing his and her part—and it all comes down to just that. If people work together and stop hoarding their money—if they give as well as take and buy the things they need—business will start humming, earnings will increase and wages will go up as a natural result.

SON: But Dad—that isn't what I asked for. I said "what does the Blue Eagle stand for? Why do stores have it in their windows?"

DAD: I see what you mean, Son. Well, President Roosevelt calls the Blue Eagle a badge of honor. It means that the stores displaying it are doing their part in the finest campaign of human service ever begun. The Blue Eagle stands for prosperity—for FAITH that everything will come out all right if we each do our part. And the stores and other concerns that display it are the ones we should patronize—don't forget that.

MOTHER: Well, Henry—if our own little part means helping out that way, we shall certainly do it. Of course, we can't buy everything we need for the Fall, but I suppose we ought to be a little freer with our savings—after all, that's what they're for. I really didn't realize what all of this means—but we'll do our part, all right—each and every one of us.

SPEND NOW AND SAVE...and DO YOUR PART

For weeks The Boston Evening American has been telling its readers about the probable effect of the new N.R.A. business codes on retail prices • Ever since the beginning of this series of advertisements wholesale prices in many lines have been on the upgrade • Meanwhile retailers have been selling goods—made before costs started upward—at regular low prices. Some items have had to be marked higher as new shipments were ordered. Most all stores, however, are still offering buying opportunities on merchandise that was produced before the business codes went into effect. • These opportunities will soon cease to be. Wise purchasers are now stocking up on their Fall and Winter needs—and "pre-code" goods are rapidly disappearing. • This is the time—and the wonderful part about "Spending Now and Saving" is that it hastens the President's program for recovery—for business—for you.

The thirty-two piece band headed by Gene H. Loy gave a concert at the bandstand in the courthouse yard at three o'clock, Saturday afternoon.

There was a good crowd out to hear the concert. While the boys were playing each number, one heard the folks who were present commenting on the concert: Isn't it a fine band? Say, those boys can play. Believe me, this is a band.

The boys stood up and played "You Gotta Quit Kicking My Dog Around." Maybe it didn't make a hit with the crowd!

Atchison Results Above Expectations

Net results of Atchison in July on several hundred thousand over expectations Revenues were somewhat better than indicated by loadings, and continued close control was exercised over expenses, which will include a sort of increased rail laying program, the major part of which, however, has not been completed.

Net operating income of $2,858,2 showed a considerable increase over June's $2,011,658, and fell only $1,000 short of the $3,909,734 in July last year.

Net after charges were $1,800,600 against net income amount $1,100,000 in June, and net income of $2,154,502 in July 1932.

Net figures were the best for any month since last November.

Inventory Advance Is Ignored by Ward Co.

Montgomery Ward & Co. reports for six months ended July 31 1933, net loss of $3,478,983 after charges including depreciation and exclusive of any inventory gains or losses during the period, against net loss of $6,124 a year before.

For quarter ended July 31 net loss was $1,282,884 against net loss of $2,196,099 in second quarter of months and loss of $1,982,555 in second quarter of 1932. All inventories carried at cost or lower.

These net results include no inventory appreciation as company states.

"This showing," company states, "should be interpreted in the light of the active general reconstruction through which the company is passing."

Through follow a not previous policy of including no inventory appreciation in net results the company has left in its inventory nations, due to rising prices this year, a substantial cushion against any possible price declines, which "cushion" would have to be absorbed before such price declines would be adversely reflected to any great extent in earnings

While officials declined to estimate present extent of inventory appreciation, they state it is considerable and on the whole about in line with the situation of other large merchandising companies

Second-quarter results, together with the company's statement on this point, indicate the program of general revamping of personnel and methods initiated following the advent of the present management is still in progress and not fully completed, although there are indications that in some directions it is fairly near completion.

U. S. INCOME IS RUNNING OVER EXPENSES

Gain for First Time Since 1929 Shown by Treasury

Washington, Aug. 29 (UP) For the first time since 1929, Federal receipts exceeded ordinary expenditures during the first 25 days of August, Treasury figures revealed today.

Receipts totaled $161,936,317 while expenditures in the "ordinary course of business" amounted to $136,936,317. Emergency expenditures however, brought the total to $287,040,458.

Treasury department officials were heartened by the large gain in income. Receipts for the fiscal year thus far have totaled $324,842,184, as compared with $170,748,835 for the corresponding period a year ago.

Ordinary expenditures during less than two months of the current fiscal year were $358,911,170, as compared with $1,290,862,150 for the same period in the last fiscal year. The deficit to date is $233,396,306 as compared with $1,067,581,081 a year ago.

Emergency expenditures so far this month were:

Administration of public works, $19,346,416; emergency conservation work, $21,180,884; R. F. C., $82,418,347; agricultural adjustment administration, $2,940,867; administration for NRA, $171,851; Tennessee Valley authority, $35,604 and federal land banks, $3,000,700.

Miscellaneous internal revenue collections since the beginning of the fiscal year amounted to $222,153,367 as compared with $37,383,920 a year ago.

STERLING IS WATCHED

If share prices are capable of ignoring the fluctuations of sterling over the near term it will not be surprising to find sterling and shares dropping their aloof airs. The general picture still then contain seeming evidence of a natural recovery not dependent on artificial stimulants. This would be the gradest of glad tidings.

Up until now the minority of intelligent rumors are said to have had their inception in brokerage circles. All by auspicious coincidence, nothing tangible is found in the usual market 'letters.' This lead, to the impression some have, recently started rumors of attracting a public following.

The next important development in world finance is the probable freezing of the franc from its gold base. The French budget is notoriously unbalanced, in the opinion of many observers. If some semblance of balance is not obtained soon it is hard to see how the present government and the franc can avoid tumbling together.

One of the outs of current investors is the absence of activity in the low-priced speculative stocks. These draw the public gaze more easily than bank priced leaders. But rarely are they worth a whirl unless a real upswing is confemplated. It is too hard to get out of them otherwise. And banks are not keen to carry them in chunks.

On the chart side of the market bull remnants are pointing to a big gap between the high of last Thursday and the low of Friday They claim that is a breakaway signal on the upside. Their claims are a bit premature. If it is not filled in before Thursday of this week their argument will be more impressive

The utilities picture is heightening somewhat. I bet a lot more dough before the rank and file of speculators will be willing to put a few dollars on them . . . Right now it looks as though Con Gas would supply a treat coast for the rest of the country . . . The bunk in group holding companies appear in the best position.

State St. Expects Test on Less Talk of Real Inflation

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State Streeters are wondering if the removal of real inflation talk is going to interfere seriously with operations for the rise. The forthright statement of Secretary Woodin sent foreign exchange quotations tumbling down hill. It now remains to be seen if the foundation under share prices is sufficiently strong to prevent a similar occurrence on domestic security boards. It will be some performance

The crowd behind this market have plenty of stock that was taken aboard during the marking up process. With so much at stake one may expect super-strong arm methods in order to prevent equity prices from falling out of bed. Previously we mentioned the safety lines. Let them work out their salvation if successful the dual averages will be put above previous closing tops. Then one may enter the fray quite confidently

BANKER'S DUTY TO NATION IS OUTLINED

Forbes Urges Leaders to Aid in Recovery Movement

By B. C. FORBES

I have never known a successful human being who did not, at some stage take a risk

John D. Rockefeller told me that in the early stages of his career, he eagerly ran risks which made conservative bankers squirm. For example, he borrowed every penny he could whenever out of bankers. He had faith in oil he had faith in the future of America, he had faith in himself.

It might truthfully be said

* * *

While I cannot conscientiously subscribe to all that NRA is attempting, to do in feverish haste, I can understand its appeal to America's bankers to "loosen up" credit, to get aboard, to join in the mighty movement to get this country going ahead

Personally, I would urge our bankers to take heed, to incur what may seem to them to be "risks" in furthering the vital, rate-laden recovery movement.

* * *

How did bankers act during the boom?

Did they then, when conservatism would have been priceless wise, exercise conservatism? Did they more heaven and earth to inculcate and promulgate caution and conservatism?

They did not.

* * *

In short, all through the period when the running of risks should have been rightly discouraged, the vast majority of our bankers were whooping things up recklessly, fostering speculation as American bankers had never before fostered speculation

* * *

Meanwhile the "boom is" Example of easy bankers was being adopted by lesser bankers through the east neat. They, too, contracted the itch to get rich quickly. They, too, became convinced that conservatism had become stultifying old-foglyism in the "new era" which, they were assured by the highest in the land, had dawned.

They too joined the three-ringed circus. Only, they employed, for the most part, their own treasures, whereas the big shots of the big banks and of the big "investment banking houses" used, as a rule, other people's money in their exploits.

* * *

In a subsequent column an attempt will be made to answer this urgently-important question, now raised prominently by the NRA

FRESH SELLING WAVES TURN STOCKS DOWN

New York, Aug. 29—A rather heavy selling flurry brought nervousness and reactionary tendencies in the final period of trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

Closing prices were generally above the lows made earlier in the session. Extreme losses ranged from 1 to more than 8 points with the alcohol issues bearing the brunt of the selling.

Although rail and utility equities displayed some resistance, many leading shares were off 1 to 3 or more points before support arrived for the retreating forces.

The sharp sell-off was attributed largely to professional operations based on a drop in international dollar rates and softness of grain prices. Cotton was hesitant and bonds mixed.

At the height of the decline in stocks the ticker tape was about five minutes behind floor transactions. The proceedings quieted down, however, after about half an hour.

In the first hour important shares turned upward after a mixed start, volume was light and near the end of the period prices were slightly below the highs set immediately after the opening. Utilities were leaders in the mild upswing and were followed by motors, tobaccos and industrials.

Gains of a point or better was shown by American Telephone, American Water Works, Consolidated Gas, Peoples Gas and Public Service of New Jersey, Bayuk Cigar advanced 2 points, Chrysler advanced moderately.

American & Foreign Power, Amerada, American Stores, A. M. Byers, Continental Can, Industrial Rayon, Stone & Webster and Western Union showed gains of 1 to 2 or more points. International Telephone and U. S. Steel gained a bit.

Drops of around a point appeared for such issues as Eastman Kodak, Ingersol Rand and U. S. Industrial Alcohol.

In the second hour the list continued to idle with scarcely any changes except in the rail division. Moderate demand in the carrier group advanced Santa Fe, New York Central, Delaware & Hudson and Union Pacific 1 to 3 or more points.

Shares up a point or so included American Telephone, Baltimore & Ohio, Consolidated Gas, New Haven, North American, Public Service of New Jersey, Woolworth and Western Union.

Pivotal industrial shares including United States Steel, Bethlehem, Allied Chemical and others in the same category gave an uninspiring performance.

In the third hour the market suffered a recession with numerous leaders down, Allied Chemical losing more than 5 points. American Commercial Alcohol was off 4. J. I. Case sagged over 3 points and there were setbacks of 2 or more points for Celanese, National Distillers, Commercial Solvents and Chrysler.

Shares a point or more lower included General Motors, New York Central, U. S. Steel, Western Union, Westinghouse Electric, Alaska Juneau and American Telephone. Selling was most marked in the repeal issues.

The repeal shares bore the brunt of new selling. American Commercial Alcohol was off over 6 points, U. S. Industrial Alcohol down over 4 and National Distillers off over 3 points.

American Telephone was down 3 points and J. I. Case sagged almost 4. Sears, Celanese, Bethlehem and U. S. Steel were down 2 or more points.

The selling wave came with surprising suddenness and the decline gained momentum as stop-loss orders were touched off with the ticker falling several minutes behind the market.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 2,330,000 shares.

Boston Wool Mart Quotations Firmer

"Wool quotations are tending firmer as a result of the increasing volume of business last week. Strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood, Ohio and similar fleeces are firm at 36-37c in the grease, and some holders are asking higher prices. Strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼ blood, good bright Ohio fleeces are held mostly at prices on the high side of the range 35-37c in the grease. The estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during the week ending August 26 amounted to 1,568,400 lbs., compared with 2,610,000 lbs. during the previous week," says the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Eureka Vacuum Co. Sales Are Greater

Sales of Eureka Vacuum Cleaner Co. for July showed a 35 per cent increase over corresponding month a year ago, states Pres. Wardwell. Indications are that August volume will show a similar or even greater increase, he says. Business gain is due in large measure to NRA influence. Recently the company announced a large expansion program calling for the addition of between 2000 and 4000 salesmen in major markets between now and first of the year.

Gold Smuggling Profits Are Big

Complaint that bootleggers, paying a premium for refined gold, were threatening ruin to the American refining industry, was sent to the Committee for the Nation by Ross M. Barrett of Philadelphia, head of Crucible Service. One bootlegging syndicate alone, he asserted, was handling about $1,000,000 worth of gold a month, purchased at prices ranging as high as $3 an ounce more than paid at the mint. Product is then smuggled to Ottawa, where premium of about $9 an ounce is collected.

ARGENTINA LAGS ON WHEAT PACT

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—Argentina has not yet signed the international wheat agreement reached last week, and an exchange of messages has been going forward between Argentine representatives in London and the government in Buenos Aires.

Whether this indicates a serious hitch was not known today, but there was a certain amount of uneasiness in wheat conference circles.

When the other nations signed on Friday, expectations were that Argentina would do likewise yesterday.

BOSTON STOCKS MOVE LOWER

Share prices turned soft in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today after selling mixed in the forenoon. Utilities which led a moderate rise earlier showed the biggest losses. American Telephone dropped more than 2 points. Edison Electric was down over a point and General Electric sagged a major fraction. New England Telephone was fractionally higher.

Pacific Mills and American Woolen were down slightly. Rails held firm with both Atchison and New Haven showing fractional improvement. Pennsylvania sagged a minor fraction. Eastern Steamship first preferred soared over 5 points.

Bar Silver Is Higher

NEW COMICS ON FIRE CHIEF AIR PROGRAM

By N. F. T.

Those two corpulent chaps (250 and 260 lbs. respectively) named Eddie East and Ralph Dumke, alias "Eddie and Ralph" alias "Sisters of the Skillet" have been beckoned to for regular contributions of their talent during the well known "Fire Chief" program starting tonight (WEEI) at 10 o'clock. Ed Wynn is still away and it seems not so easy a task filling his studio shoes. Despite much monologuing that included joke material quite likely to have made old John Whiskers Methuselah chuckle, Ed Wynn has rather definitely identified himself with said gasoline program. What's more, he has done so in such a way as to afford any air artist or team attempting to replace him, some exceedingly tough loudspeaker sledding.

* * *

In any event, Messrs. East and Dumke have held forth with marked success to date, backed by several outstanding commercial sponsors. Realizing they have no bowl of duck soup being dished up to them while substituting for the "Perfect Fool" brand of broadcasting, they honestly believe they can click in there with a resounding network echo. Their new comedy venture consists of burlesque business based on experiences of "Two Reporters" staging a wise crack contest.

* * *

SONGS FOR SALE

Harmony by the Four Mills Brothers on a Tuesday and Thursday twice weekly series gets started tonight (WNAC) between 7:30 and 7:45. Then the Boswell Sisters trio also take to a new fall assignment (WNAC) beginning tomorrow and due Wednesday and Friday evenings henceforth at 10:30 P. M. Here are two of the most popular groups in the CBS sustaining artist array and it's a fancy figure they bring when an advertiser signs on the dotted line for their vocal services. However, right now the Mills boys and the Boswell girls are going to work temporarily without benefit of sponsorship. It is of course the network program planners' idea to impress two sales promotion minded manufacturers of something, one for each combination. Putting them both on a set schedule now is a part of that plan.

CONSUMERS CAMPAIGN

Big doings hereabouts tomorrow afternoon when the NRA rally at the Hotel Statler takes place. Recovery Administration head man Hugh Johnson arrives from Washington to address the assembled Blue Eagle consumer drive workers, with N. B. C. and C. B. S. chain systems carrying his voice out of Boston from coast to coast. Governor Ely and Mayor Curley are also slated to make spirited speeches. WBZ-WBAZ and WNAC will transmit the festivities for an hour between 1 and 2 o'clock.

This Country Has Grown

Chicago Shows It. And How It Will CONTINUE to Grow

THIS SHOWS, AS IT WAS IN 1833, THE PART OF MODERN CHICAGO THAT IS PICTURED AT THE TOP OF THE PAGE

It isn't necessary to say more, except to suggest that a country with a city like Chicago that can make this change in one hundred years, while most cities in Europe and elsewhere have been practically standing still, will make many other changes just as remarkable in the NEXT one hundred years and in the one hundred after that and so on.

The building on the left in the little picture is an old-fashioned inn; the picture hanging above it shows a bull or an ox. The Indians in their canoe are bringing in wild ducks shot out in the lake or perhaps at the mouth of the Chicago River.

Game was once cheap in this country. You need not be very old to remember when delicious prairie chicken were sold two for twenty-five cents.

Some will sigh for "the good old days." But they need not. Modern days with elevators, paved streets, sewers, electric light and all the other improvements, PUBLIC SCHOOLS especially, are better, less picturesque, if you like, but BETTER.

P. S.—The picture above is reproduced by permission of Ackerman and Son, of 408 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

Politics Now Ruled Out at Muscle Shoals

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Under the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt, a new conservation is emerging as a national policy.

This is the conservation of human resources that is the goal of the great national experiment which the Roosevelt now in the White House has entrusted to the Tennessee Valley authority.

This is the federal agency created by the Congress and reporting directly to the President, which is charged with the development of the Tennessee River basin, not merely as a new industrial and agricultural unit, but as a new regional contribution of social as well as economic value to the household of the nation.

As requested by the President, Congress has made this agency "a corporation clothed with the power of government but possessed of the flexibility and initiative of a private enterprise."

BOARD OF THREE DIRECTORS

It is administered by a board of three directors whom the President has selected with the greatest care. They are Dr. Arthur Ernest Morgan, president of Antioch College; Dr. Harcourt Alexander Morgan, head of the University of Tennessee, and Mr. David E. Lilienthal of Wisconsin. And the president of Antioch College has been designated chairman of the board, whose work will be chiefly under the control of the President.

The main objective of this unique agency will be, in the words of Chairman Morgan, "to inspire systematic and balanced development of the social and economic life" of one of the great regions of continental United States.

Owing to the low agricultural yield and high birth rate, the surplus population of the region has been forced to seek employment in the cities. The several million people of original American stock who are scattered over the mountain area are a self-reliant folk. They have a love of home and a habit of independence that makes them reluctant to exchange for the life and work of crowded cities the environment of their youth.

It is hoped by teaming up agriculture and industry in this region its people can develop themselves into independent communities. If that can be done they will not be compelled to swell the ranks of the unemployed now seeking work in Detroit, Cleveland, Dayton and other cities which in the past have attracted many valley residents.

RUSH TO CITIES A PROBLEM

Chairman Morgan and his fellow directors are doing their best to prevent rush of the unemployed of the cities into this region. There is no present need for outside help in the development of the Muscle Shoals property or in the construction of the proposed Cove Creek and other dams which are to supply urban and rural residents in the Tennessee Valley with cheap power, fertilizer and other requisites for the balanced development of that region.

Many Americans born in this valley, having lost their jobs in the cities and outside industrial areas, have returned to their homes in the hills and are waiting and hoping for a job. These are the people who will be given preference in the new employment which this vast experiment will create. And there are thousands more than enough of valley residents to supply the demands of workers for several years to come.

In developing the Tennessee basin the policy of President Roosevelt is "to take care of the local unemployed so far as possible."

Although the Tennessee Valley Authority is only several months old, its honorable manar in which it has been organized, its complete freedom from partisan politics, the feasibility of its program and the vision of the President that created it combine to inspire popular confidence in its ultimate success.

And if this experiment succeeds the new conservation launched by Franklin D. Roosevelt will be hailed in history as one of the greatest achievements of his administration.

O. O. McIntyre -:- New York Day by Day

Authors Avoid New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Very few writers of note live in New York any more. Time was when the most distinguished resided in Greenwich village or Washington Square. It was believed a close contact with editors and publishers was necessary. This has proved a fallacy.

O. O. McIntyre

Top-notch novelists and magazine writers come to town once a year but usually to catch a steamer for Europe. Often they do not even call at the editorial rooms. Nearly all have their literary agents transact their affairs by mail and telegraph.

Any number, including Hemingway and Louis bromfield, reside in Europe. Scores live on the Pacific coast—more indeed than on the Atlantic. A few live in Boston environs, notably Ben Ames Williams. Harold Bell Wright in Tucson may not come East for three years at a stretch.

* * *

Gouverneur Morris sold fiction steadily for years from Tahiti and there is, of course, Pearl Buck's amazing success from far away China. Vicki Baum did well by herself from Germany for a long time. Editors have scouts who rush to those who can deliver the goods wherever they are.

* * *

Expert chefs rarely smoke because of the fear of dulling their highly sensitized taste. Oscar of the Waldorf was no exception until three years ago—his 64th year—he began smoking a pipe. His interest became so keen his collection of pipes is now regarded as the finest in the world.

* * *

Incidentally, Lucius Boomer, director of the Waldorf is, next to Dr. John Winley of the Times, the town's most indefatigable walker. It was not unusual for him to walk from the old Waldorf to Mt. Vernon. George M. Cohan is the most tireless stroller of the theatre, averaging at least six miles daily.

* * *

The most spectacular of the rural speakeasies, masquerading as a "country club," has been running full tilt two months near picturesque hills of Mt. Kisco in Westchester. The proprietors are also pilots of Manhattan's most pretentious hideaway. The "speak" was originally a half million dollar manor moved stone by stone from an English Tudor estate. There are terraces, formal gardens, swimming pools, dance floors, four restaurants and a tremendous bar. So enormous is the patronage, especially on Saturday nights, it's necessary to keep eight State Troopers on duty until 6 a. m. to control traffic.

* * *

In a mid-west hotel where we once lived was a girl of six who could be perfectly described as a brat. Cruelly wicked, she tried to drown kittens and stick pins in the pet dog. Her bursts of uncontrollable temper were amazing studies in human fury. My wife and I often wondered her finish. Today we learned. She is a nun.

* * *

There is something of a grand descriptive writer in a truckman who called at Leon Gordon's studio for a nude the artist was keeping for a friend. The truckman's receipt read: "Re'd—1 smear of a trail in birthday clothes."

* * *

* * *

The most industrious street begger of the time is One Band Ike. On his back is a bass drum with cymbals which beat and clash, due to a wired connection, when he kicks up his heels. In one hand he carries a tambourine, in the other a clarinet which gives the effect of six pigs caught under a fence. No one can so enliven a city block. He tells me he averages $4 a day.

* * *

Marine artists are seldom expert navigators in sail. Two of the notable exceptions are Rockwell Kent and Stephen Eitner. They manage their boats with the graceful casualism of old salts. On the other hand, only men who have known the sea intimately—Conrad, McFee et al—have ever been successful in turning out fiction tayles of the deep.

* * *

I should say the most exotic Park Avenue wound of the season was that sustained by a gilded youth named Winthrop Saltus who was bitten by a pet ocelot.

Just Folks

Thoughtlessness

And blur the eyes that ought to smile with many needless tears.

A little bit of shouting in a sharp and vicious tone
Can leave a sting that will be felt when many years have flown.
And just one hasty minute of ill-temper can offend

It doesn't call for courage to employ a lash that stings;

For only those are happy and keep their peace of mind

Human Side of the News

Timothy Dexter of Newburyport — Floral Service for Gloucester Men Lost at Sea

By Edwin C. Hill

Newburyport, Massachusetts, picturesque old whaling town, which once placed in the mayor's office a red-haired, crap-shooting, fist-fighting ex-sailor named Bossy Gillis, has a way of producing extremely original specimens of the human race, and of all such products Lord Timothy Dexter was the rarest and richest. He was a tanner's son who got rich by buying up Continental paper money during the Revolutionary War. His fame has been preserved in verse, for a poet sang of him:

Timothy Dexter of Newburyport,
Was a gay old soul of a rare old sort,
For West Indian trade he laid his plans
So he sailed with cargo of warming pans,
And when he discovered for things like these
No market at all in the Caribbees,
His comment was merely, "We aim to please."

And the pans he sold to a sugar mill
For molasses ladies. "Bring all you've got!"
They cried, and he went for another lot.
And he sold the lids to the native beaux
Who wore 'em suspended from ear or nose
And asked, "Can you furnish some more of those?"

So he sailed back home where he lived in state
And he set up statues of men of fame,
With Timothy Dexter among the same.
And he wronged no man nor was sued in tort
Timothy Dexter of Newburyport.

He collected beautiful books which he did not open. He collected watches and clocks and used to walk through the house from one to another, calling each clock by a pet name. He gave himself the title of "Lord" and appointed his own poet laureate to sing his praises. He held town office—the old New England town office of "Informer of Deer." His job was to alarm the town when deer strayed in from the forest to browse in the vegetable gardens.

He rode in a grand, gilded coach and-four, never stopped talking or writing, scribbling; wrote a book without any punctuation whatever and died leaving a small estate for his heirs to tear into even smaller fractions.

Queer he was, and maybe a little crazy—yet nobody's fool. Today at the top of High st. in Newburyport stands his beautiful square, white house, with its Georgian cupola and the Captain's Walk, from which, with a spy-glass, he could see his ships making in from the Indies with bright new Spanish gold in exchange for warming pans, woolen mittens, Bibles and New England rum. But the famous wooden statues blew down in a hurricane and no trace is left of his own with its inscription: "I am the greatest man in the East or West."

* * *

From a quaint, white church in another old seaport of Massachusetts, men, women and children take their way silently, with bowed heads, in slow-moving procession. In that procession are old men, bent and broken, who have given to the sea all they have to give, except life itself. And there are women, young, middle-aged or elderly, and all in black, and all showing faces saddened by tragedy. The children in the procession have no smiles, no gayety. As they match their short, quick steps with the longer strides of their elders, they look up now and then in wide-eyed wonderment.

Almost everyone in that slow, sad processional carries flowers—lovely, bright flowers from old New England gardens—sprays and wreaths and bouquets. And presently they reach the bridge where the river flows into the sea, and they stop there. The chaplain gazes out over the blue water, so beautiful under the sun, so fatal to these grieving folk. And one by one the chaplain reads a list of names, names of sons and husbands and brothers and fathers, and as each name is read and there follows a long pause, flowers are cast into the tide. As the flowers drift seaward on the ebb tide and the prayers are said the inexpressibly mournful echo of the bell buoys makes a refrain that is tragically appropriate.

North and East, to bank and coast, where they lie whom we love most.

The most touching item in all the news is this annual service held in the old seaport town of Gloucester, in memory of her sons that are taken in the past year by the relentless sea. There is nothing like it in America anywhere. Eight thousand men of Gloucester have been taken by the sea since the first fishing fleets sailed away to the Banks of Newfoundland to brave the fogs and storms of the North Atlantic.

Year after year it is the same. The day comes when the menfolk of the family must take to the sea. Year after year the harborside is lined with the children and old men and the women. And smile through their tears and wave a gay farewell, all knowing that grief must come to some of their number before the year is out. Looking at each other with the silent thought: "Will it be you this time, or me?"

Always the same, generation after generation . . . Prisoners of fate.

Nonogenarian Advice

At the age of ninety, "Pap" Tabor, a life-termer, has no intention of leaving the State Prison Farm near Pachman, Mississippi.

His sincerity is not to be doubted. In eighteen years, "Pap" has rejected full pardons from two Governors. "Pap" will remain right where he is, contented.

"Don't ever become a convict," he warns all the young men outside his walls. "You can live right, and still be as happy as I am."

Good, sound Nestorian advice! But somehow, it reminds one of the police slogan of a few years ago, which was to convert young offenders from the ways of crime:

Whatever became of that thought? Has it been lost forever in the din of bootlegging and racketeering?
